Naval Activity Retards Movements Of Troops By Nipponese

DETAILS ARE WITHHELD

MacArthur's Defenses Wage Campaign Against Infiltration

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17—Japan's military operations have become increasingly hazardous, Washington observers said today, pointing out that American naval action, by retarding movements of Nipponese troops, has struck a telling blow in defense of the Philippines, Malaya, China and the Indies.

While the frustrated Japanese high command entrusted especially trained and equipped infiltration troops to break the deadlock in the Philippines, the U. S. Navy sank five enemy ships in "Far Eastern Waters."

Japan's losses in this phase of the sea war included two large transport ships and one small one, along with two cargo boats. The Navy department's communique failed to disclose whether the vessels were loaded with men and supplies.

The Navy, moreover, did not announce where the ships went down, obviously to maintain the necessary cloak of secrecy over operations of Admiral Thomas C. Hart's Asiatic fleet.

In the absence of further details concerning the sinkings, experts were unable to determine the exact direction in which the Japanese boats were cruising. They conjectured, however, that the vessels were engaged in hauling reinforcements to one of the battle areas.

"Hammer Blow"

Observers unanimously agreed after studying the Navy's terse communique that loss of the five ships, irrespective of their destination, was a sledge-hammer blow to Japan's general war plan. They explained that Nippon now is engaged on such a far-flung front that men and means to maneuver them over vast expanses of ocean are an utmost necessity to the Japanese.

The ever-growing danger in store for Japan was brought more sharply into relief by recapitulation of American naval successes since the war began.

Destruction of the transport and cargo bottoms came only a day after the Navy sank a 17,000-ton merchant ship. In all, the Navy and Marine Corps have destroyed 24 Japanese vessels, and, in addition, Army air bombers have sunk five more enemy boats in the Pacific arena. Altogether, Japan has lost 29 ships since the Mikado plunged his nation into war last December 7.

The Navy also authorized distribution of a report that the Coimbra, a 6,768-ton tanker ABCD (Continued on Page Eight)

Personal Intervention By Goebbels Saved Boemer

(Editor's Note: In this article of his series on "Hitler Unmasked," Pierre J. Huss, for eight years chief Berlin correspondent of International News Service, concludes the story of Karl Boemer, who pitched from a pinnacle of power to a chair of death before the People's Court, only to find himself rescued by the eloquence of no one less than Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels himself.)

By PIERRE J. HUSS
INS Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Jan. 17—Karl Boemer went home to his patient wife and put on a dress uniform for the reception that night at the Bulgarian Legation. He went there in a state of excitement, one of the handful of men inside the Reich that night possessed of the greatest Hitler secret in years.

For days the air had vibrated with rumor and speculation on what was to come next. Some said the invasion of England; others believed that Stalin and Hitler were going to join forces after a deal splitting up the Middle East and the rest of the continent. A dozen other versions floated around, but Boemer could afford to smile and look dumb.

The usual crowd of Axis diplomats and their wives were on hand, brimming with gossip and mischief. Men with keen dark eyes from the Balkans watched Boemer drink his fill, and later they engaged him in conversation in a far off corner. They talked of the manly capacities of drinking, stressing the Russian custom of pouring down a glass of vodka with every breath. They told of the matchless capacity for vodka of Stalin and Molotov in Moscow, asserting that no man could equal these two.

Boemer said he could do it, and lifted glass after glass. The room spun around after a while, and he became talkative. A friend of his who tried to persuade him to come home was rudely shoved aside, and two men in plain dark suits of the familiar Gestapo took him neatly but firmly under the arms and wished (Continued on Page Eight)

PROTEST GROUP TOLD CAMP WILL BE CONSTRUCTED

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 17—Stephen Young, Democrat, Ohio, today told a delegation of Ohio citizens that nothing can now be done to halt building of an Army training camp in Ross and Pickaway Counties.

The delegation, headed by Robert L. Immell, Yellowbud, called on the congressman and on the War Department and OPM officials, protesting taking over of land in those counties, contending that land of less value could be obtained elsewhere.

"I am protesting very bitterly, but I am afraid nothing can be done about it now," Young declared. "The War Department already has proceeded quite a long way with its plans for that area."

Several new developments in the proposed Pickaway-Ross County Army cantonment appeared Saturday as bids on either abstract or certificate of title work on the camp area were being opened at the Ohio River district office of the U. S. Army Engineers, Cincinnati.

Bids were being opened publicly and reports are that the successful bidder will be ready to start on abstract or certificate of title work within a week.

County Engineer Henry McCrady was in Chillicothe Saturday discussing with camp engineers the condition and location of county roads in Deer Creek, Perry and Wayne Townships.

Raymond S. Ater, Chillicothe, has filed application with the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio for a bus line between Chillicothe and the camp. In his application Mr. Ater pointed to the necessity of transporting persons from Chillicothe to a proposed triangular United States Army camp north of Chillicothe, a distance of 10 miles over State Route 104.

Aftermath of Family Tragedy

MRS. Josephine Artist, 35, embraces her 19-year-old son Thomas in a Chicago police station where he was held following a family argument during which the youth allegedly stabbed his father to death. Police said the tragedy took place when the father, Russell, 39, came home intoxicated, started an argument and began beating his wife in the presence of the five Artist children. It was then that Thomas seized an old hunting knife and stabbed his father to death. Police said that the boy had a good reputation and had never been in trouble before.

Heavy Malayan Conflict Rages

British Defenders Of Singapore Hurl Strength Against Jap Forces

SINGAPORE, Jan. 17—Heavy death-dealing air attacks on Japanese ships, barges and land transport columns were announced by the British Far Eastern command today.

At the same time, a communique admitted Japanese forces have gained a footing on the south bank of the Muar River in western Malaya, about 100 miles northwest of Singapore.

The river forms the left flank of the "Pownall line," along which a major battle is expected to develop between Japanese and British-Australian forces in the near future.

The communique conceded the Japs have occupied Gemas, 110 miles north of Singapore and also reported two new Japanese air attacks on Singapore which caused about 150 civilian casualties.

Heavy casualties were declared to have been inflicted on the Japs when R.A.F. planes pounded launches and barges loaded with troops near the mouth of the Muar River.

Likewise, severe damage was inflicted on Japanese shipping off Malacca, the war bulletin stated. Meanwhile, the Aussies at the front still were harrying the Japs.

A great battle probably will occur along the Pownall line of defenses, believed to be between 80 and 100 miles north of Singapore.

Latest indications were that the Japs have been halted dead in their tracks after meeting up with the hard-bitten Australians, who are credited with inflicting 200 casualties on the Japanese in their first engagement.

During the last few days heavy rains that have inundated the Malayan jungles and quagmired the roads have allowed the British more time to consolidate their positions and equip their troops, which suffered losses in the recent heavy fighting.

GRANVILLE CADET KILLED

U. S. STAMPS FOR AUTOS WILL GO ON SALE MONDAY

Federal auto tax stamps will go on sale Monday at the postoffice, Postmaster Hulise Hays has announced.

Floyd Seymour, 304 East Franklin Street, will be in charge of the stamp sale and the stamps will be sold exclusively at the stamp window in the postoffice building.

Stamps cost $2.00 and may be purchased with cash, certified check or money order, the postmaster explained. They will be sold during the regular postoffice hours.

When a motor vehicle owner purchases a stamp he will be given a registration certificate which he must fill out and mail to the Collector of Internal Revenue of the local district. The card requires a one cent stamp.

Stamps must be secured before February 1, 1942 and must be affixed to motor vehicle, on the windshield, dash or in a place where they may be easily seen.

BRITISH PRIME MINISTER, PARTY BACK IN LONDON

Churchill, Others Cross Atlantic By Plane From Bermuda

LONDON, Jan. 17—Fit and well after a flight across the Atlantic from Bermuda, Prime Minister Winston Churchill returned to Britain today after his visit to the United States for extended war conferences with President Roosevelt.

The prime minister and members of his party arrived at the west coast port of Plymouth aboard the civilian flying boat which had carried them across the ocean from Bermuda.

Before leaving Plymouth, presumably for London, Churchill told reporters he had enjoyed a comfortable journey.

Churchill said he had flown 3,287 miles in 18 hours.

His departure from Plymouth was delayed 20 minutes by temporary loss of a large black bag. Supply Minister Lord Beaverbrook, who accompanied the premier, and other distinguished members of the party joined in the worried search for the bag, which eventually was found.

Churchill's arrival in Britain came as a complete surprise to the public. There had been no previous announcement of his departure from the United States.

Sunday will be the last day that motorists may angle park on Court Street, Mayor Ben H. Gordon announcing Saturday that the traffic department was prepared to begin its new program of parallel parking on Court Street Monday morning.

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Jan. 17—Aided by Indian guides and mountain climbers, posses of soldiers, deputy sheriffs and civilians made their way up rugged Table Rock Mountain today to reach the wreckage of a T.W.A. airliner which crashed and burned, killing Screen Star Carole Lombard, her mother and 20 other persons, including 15 Army Air Corps officers and men.

Airlines officials said that there was no doubt that all

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17—In an unusual tribute, the Treasury Department today officially announced that Carole Lombard, famed movie actress, had lost her life in the service of her country. Carlton Duffas, who has charge of special activities in the Treasury's Defense Stamp drive, said that Miss Lombard would have been riding on a train instead of the ill-fated TWA plane that crashed last night near Las Vegas, Nev., had she not consented to aid the government's efforts to raise funds.

persons aboard the ship were killed, probably instantly, when the huge plane struck the snow-capped mountain-side.

Workers in the Blue Diamond mine near Arden, Nev., reported hearing a terrific explosion and then seeing a huge fire burning high up on the mountain.

A T.W.A. pilot, Art Cheyney, who flew over the area at 8:10 p. m. Friday—40 minutes after the ship crashed—reported the burning wreckage was unmistakably the missing T.W.A. airliner.

War Bulletins

RANGOON—Japanese troops pushing into Burma from Thailand have been checked in a sharp battle at Midta, 15 miles inside the Burmese border, it was revealed today.

MOSCOW—Russian front line reports hinted today that Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's southern Russian armies have completed their encirclement of Kharkov and may occupy the great industrial city within a few days.

CHUNGKING—Another victory has been scored by Chinese troops, this time in the Hwalyang area of Honan province, where a Japanese "rescue force" was "decimated."

LONDON—Reuters news agency today quoted a German (DNB) Tokyo dispatch as stating that 10 percent of the Japanese troops in Malaya were officially reported to be suffering from malaria or other diseases.

BATAVIA, N. E. I.—Japanese bombers today renewed their raids on objectives in the Netherlands East Indies, bombing the naval base harbor of Ambolia, machine-gunning two nearby places and attacking an airdrome in the Celebes. It was announced in Batavia.

LONDON—In a slashing attack on government "incompetents" at home and abroad, Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite member of Parliament, charged today that Britain has been caught napping in every theatre of war.

STAR'S CAREER BEGAN AS MACK SENNETT BEAUTY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17—A career which saw her rise from a $50 a week Mack Sennett bathing beauty to one of Hollywood's highest paid performers, was Carole Lombard's.

Listed today as one of the 22 victims of a transport plane crash in Nevada, she was the first Hollywood notable to give her life in the cause of National Defense.

She was returning from Indianapolis, where she had made a flying trip to sell Defense Bonds in an Indiana state observance. Miss Lombard was born Carole June Peters, in Fort Wayne, Indiana, October 6, 1909.

In private life she was the wife of Clark Gable, another of Hollywood's top ranking film performers.

Preparing for his newest picture, Gable had not been able to make the trip with her.

Her last extended flying trip was more than two years ago when she flew with her husband to Atlanta, Ga., for the world premiere of "Gone With the Wind."

Miss Lombard married Gable after a courtship of two years. The ceremony was performed on March 29, 1938, at Kingman, Ariz., catching Hollywood offguard. On that day most of filmland's notables and correspondents were at the San Francisco Fair attending the world premiere of "Alexander Graham Bell."

Otto Winkler, another of the plane's victims, was the best man at the ceremony. Besides being their publicity man, he was one of the Gables' closest personal friends.

Miss Lombard's marriage to Gable was her second. She was divorced August 18, 1933 from William Powell, the screen's "thin man" whom she had married in June 1931 before her real climb to fame began.

From a financial viewpoint, Miss Lombard reached the peak of her career in 1937, when she earned $460,000, the highest figure paid that year to any Hollywood player.

LIBYAN DESERT PASS TAKEN BY BRITISH FORCES

CAIRO, Jan. 17—The axis garrison trapped at Halfaya Pass in the Libyan desert near the Egyptian frontier surrendered unconditionally today.

Sunday will be the last day that motorists may angle park on Court Street, Mayor Ben H. Gordon announcing Saturday that the traffic department was prepared to begin its new program of parallel parking on Court Street Monday morning.

Service Director Clarence Helvering said Saturday that his department would place temporary traffic lines on Court Street parallel to the curb sometime Sunday to assist motorists. Lime probably will be used in making the markers, he said.

The new program calls for parallel parking on Court Street and for no parking on Court north of Pleasant, the action being taken in compliance with the highway department's request.

Meanwhile, first evidence that the installation of parking meters may not be far away came Saturday when Service Director Helvering reported he had received a package with instructions to hold it for the Dual Meter Company. The service director said he did not open the package but added that presumably, it carried parking meter equipment.

The new parking program brings reports from official circles in Council that additional personnel and equipment for traffic enforcement are badly needed. Councilmen held another lengthy session in the Council Chamber Friday night, going over each item of their 1942 budget before officially placing on it their stamp of approval. By cutting every possible expenditure to a minimum they hope to secure additional funds for traffic enforcement. They will meet again Tuesday night to finish their discussion on the budget and report they will have a bullet for a .38 caliber revolver into his head. Grennan had been in ill health.

STAR'S CAREER BEGAN AS MACK SENNETT BEAUTY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17—A career which saw her rise from a $50 a week Mack Sennett bathing beauty to one of Hollywood's highest paid performers, was Carole Lombard's.

Listed today as one of the 22 victims of a transport plane crash in Nevada, she was the first Hollywood notable to give her life in the cause of National Defense.

She was returning from Indianapolis, where she had made a flying trip to sell Defense Bonds in an Indiana state observance. Miss Lombard was born Carole Jane Peters, in Fort Wayne, Indiana, October 6, 1909.

In private life she was the wife of Clark Gable, another of Hollywood's top ranking film performers.

Preparing for his newest picture, Gable had not been able to make the trip with her.

Her last extended flying trip was more than two years ago when she flew with her husband to Atlanta, Ga., for the world premiere of "Gone With the Wind."

Miss Lombard married Gable after a courtship of two years. The ceremony was performed on March 29, 1938, at Kingman, Ariz., catching Hollywood offguard. On that day most of filmland's notables and correspondents were at the San Francisco Fair attending the world premiere of "Alexander Graham Bell."

Otto Winkler, another of the plane's victims, was the best man at the ceremony. Besides being their publicity man, he was one of the Gables' closest personal friends.

Miss Lombard's marriage to Gable was her second. She was divorced August 18, 1933 from William Powell, the screen's "thin man" whom she had married in June 1931 before her real climb to fame began.

From a financial viewpoint, Miss Lombard reached the peak of her career in 1937, when she earned $460,000, the highest figure paid that year to any Hollywood player.

LIBYAN DESERT PASS TAKEN BY BRITISH FORCES

CAIRO, Jan. 17—The axis garrison trapped at Halfaya Pass in the Libyan desert near the Egyptian frontier surrendered unconditionally today.

Announcement that the axis forces had given up after repeated land and sea artillery attacks on their positions was made by the British middle east command at Cairo.

ASHVILLE WINS; PIRATES, SCIOTO OUTFITS CLOSE

Walnut's Early Lead Gives It Margin Over Quintet From Williamsport

Thrilling basketball—the kind that keeps fans on their toes and youthful athletes bearing down the whole way—marked Friday night's schedule of contests in the Pickaway County Class B League. There were no upsets, all the favorites coming through with victories, but several of the so-called stronger teams were forced to the limit to bring home victories.

The scores were:

VARSITY
Walnut 23, Williamsport 19.
Salt Creek 41, Perry 27.
Ashville 37, Jackson 22.
Washington 36, Monroe 23.
Pickaway 21, Scioto 18.
Jeffersonville 48, New Holland 45.

RESERVES
Walnut 21, Williamsport 8.
Perry 31, Salt Creek 16.
Ashville 26, Jackson 14.
Monroe 14, Washington 9.
Pickaway 25, Scioto 11.

Non-League
New Holland 37, Jeffersonville 14.

The Pickaway-Scioto game at Commercial Point was one of the outstanding of the evening. The Pirates needed a victory to stay on the heels of the league-leading Ashville Bronkos, and they came through in the last period after being deadlocked by the Scioto youths at 16-16 as the last session started. Pickaway held an 8-5 lead at halftime but Coach Shipley's boys put on a brilliant third quarter rally to tie it. The Scioto youths held Gene Hall, high scoring Pickaway guard, without a single marker. Beavers, Scioto captain who was moved from a forward to a guard position, carried off scoring honors with nine.

Close At Half

Jackson Township threw a scare into the Ashville team by trailing only two points, 9-11, at the halftime intermission. However, Dick Carter's lads piled on coal in the last half to win going away. Mehafeey was top man for the winners with 11 points. Wilson and Nance hit seven each, with Bumgarner and Mowery best for Jackson.

Williamsport made a fight of it by dropping only a four point decision to Jud Lanman's improved Walnut team. The Walnut boys grabbed a 15-5 lead at the half by scoring 14 points in the last four minutes of the second quarter, but they bogged down in the last two cantos to make the game close. Return of Wright and Dewey to the Deercreek team helped that outfit considerably. As usual, Walnut's scoring was evenly divided, while Schein and Wright split honors for Williamsport.

Washington moved over to Monroe to cop a rough one, leading all the way but being forced to play ball. The Monroe team trailed by only five points at the halftime, 12-17, but couldn't stand the pace in the last half. Wertman and Rife did most of Washington's scoring.

Salt Creek was held to a 15-15 score at the half over at Atlanta, but the Perry boys started to foul out in the third period and fell behind from there on. Salt Creek completed 13 free tosses to help boost its score. Jones with 19 and Spencer with 13 accounted for most of the winner's scoring.

Cramer Hits 33

New Holland took on the fast Jeffersonville team on the Buldog court and dropped a thriller by only three points. With a minute to go the score was tied at 45-45, but Jeffersonville added a free toss and a bucket to clinch the affray. Cramer, six foot five inch forward of the Jeffersonville team, scored 13 field goals and seven free tosses for 33 points. The halftime found New Holland ahead, 29-25.

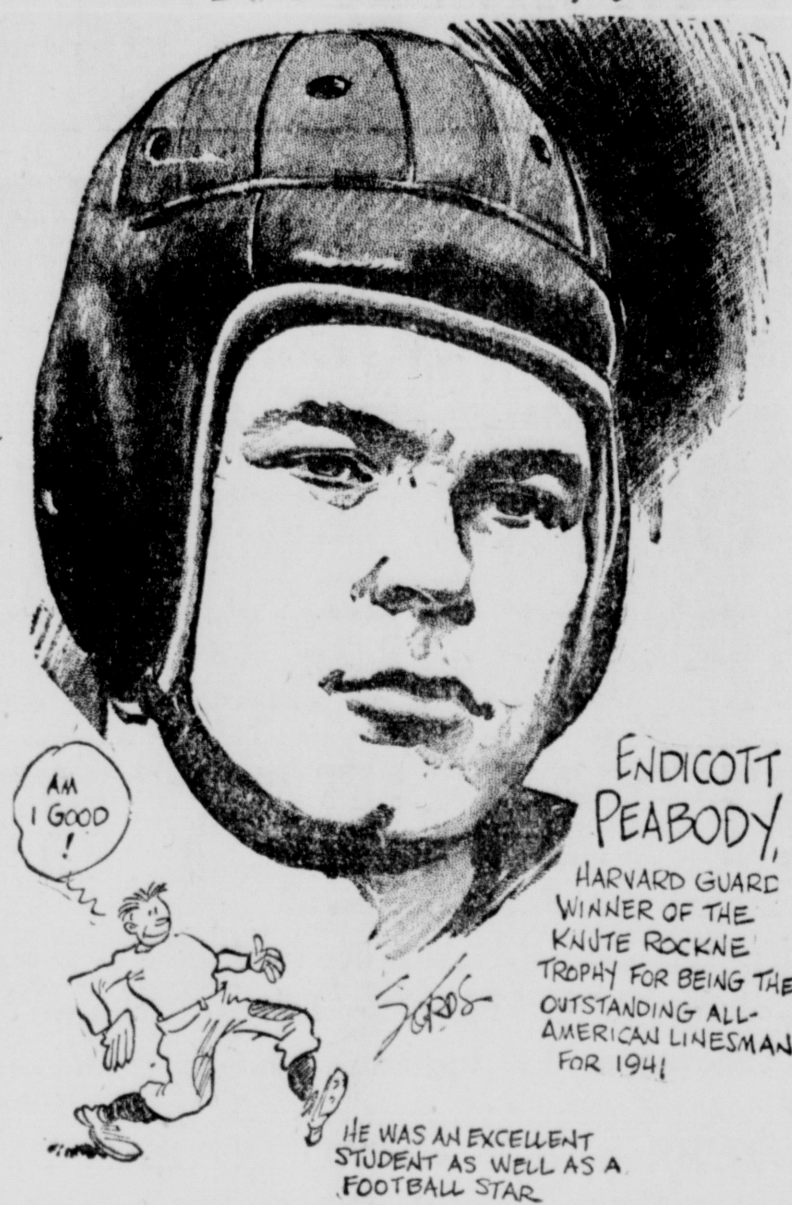

Games scheduled next Friday include New Holland at Williamsport, Monroe at Walnut, Salt Creek at Darby, Perry at Ashville and Jackson at Washington.

Highway Is Being Moved
MIAMI, Fla. — Approximately ten miles of the Florida cross-state highway just outside of Miami is being moved to escape waters of the Tamiami Canal. The road is being shifted eleven feet from the canal, which parallels it, and the muck foundation which underlies the original road, is being dug out and a rock base substituted. The project is expected to take nearly six months, and will cost $267,879.

Carnelian and sardonyx, August birthstones, are under the constellation Leo and the sun. They should be worn on the left side near the sun of the human body, which is the heart, governed by Leo.

ROBINSON PUTS ZIVIC ON MAT

Harlem Clouter After Title Contest With Red Cochran

By Jack Singer

NEW YORK, Jan. 17—The only thing that has been able to whip Ray (Sugar) Robinson is the gripper—and if given a return bout, Harlem's sensational punching pinwheel would be a cinch to knock out the bum.

If Welterweight Champion Freddie (Red) Cochran, of the United States Navy, is smart, he will take the next boat for the Philippines. He is a lot less likely to get hurt fighting those stumblers, the Japs, than climbing into the same ring with Mr. Robinson on the night of February 20.

The precocious Harlem hep cat, who won't be 21 until next May, gave a remarkable exhibition of paralyzing punching and cunning boxing in stopping Fritz Zivic, the flat-nosed Pittsburgh museum piece, in 31 seconds of the tenth round of a scheduled 12-round contest last night in Madison Square Garden. It was Robinson's 27th consecutive victory since he entered the pay-to-slay ranks in October, 1940, and his twenty-first knockout in 27 fights. If all his opponents were laid end to end, they'd look natural.

Before the bout, Herman (Mugsy) Taylor, the Philadelphia promoter, vainly sought an injunction to stop Robinson from going through with the fight. After the first round, Zivic was sorry Taylor didn't succeed. Dropping every round but the seventh before he finally dropped himself, the antiquated Fritz thought he'd run into a hive of wasps, all wearing boxing gloves.

Midway through the ninth round, the lethal-punching Negro fired a whistling right cross to the jaw which spun Zivic around and sent him pitching forward on his face, his head buried in the canvas like an ostrich.

His eyes as glassy as his jaw, Zivic climbed to one knee at the count of three looking as if he'd fallen into a flour barrel. The entire left side of his head was smeared with resin dust. He tottered to his feet at the count of nine, and it was obvious that the rubber shortage hadn't affected Fritz. He had plenty in his legs.

The hell saved Zivic in the ninth, but Robinson surged out for the tenth, pinned the woozy veteran against the ropes and hammered him mercilessly with a two-fisted leather barrage. Zivic slowly sank to his knees, his back resting against the bottom rope.

Referee Arthur Donovan didn't even bother to count, stopping the scrap, although Zivic, in full possession of his mental faculties, could have arisen to resume the hopeless struggle against his younger and faster foe.

From the opening bell until the stunning finish the crowd of 15,475, which contributed a gross gate of $45,054, breathlessly waited for Zivic to open up. But all he did was coverup. The Pittsburgh ring relie apparently didn't have anything but his old age insurance.

Robinson punched too fast and moved too fast, and except for the seventh round, in which Zivic hurt the flashy youngster with a sharp right to the body, Fritz couldn't find his opponent with a submarine detector.

Chiefly because he hasn't any one better, Olsen will again start Dick Fisher and Fred Miller at forwards and hope that they can regain their former familiarity with the procedure of scoring.

Little Max Geowets, the "people's choice" and Jack Graf, whose two trick knees keep him in hot water most of the time will round

Dramatic Highlights in Cooking School Programs

IN past years, the Herald Cooking School has established a reputation for entertaining and dramatic programs wherever it has been presented. This year's programs are no exception. In fact, this year's presentations are enlivened more than ever with drama and dialogue. The programs are keyed to the theme of the times—one of national defense and patriotism. In spite of their informal conversational style, they are packed full of timely, important information in which every American homemaker will be tremendously interested. Pictured here are a few of the dramatic situations which develop throughout the programs, which will be presented in Memorial Hall, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons, January 21, 22, 23.

MEL OTT RATES NOD AS SPORTS "MAN OF WEEK"

By International News Service

One of the grandest little fellows in all the world of sport—Melvin Ott, newly created manager of the Giants—draws the little brass ring this week for winning the New York Baseball Writers Annual award bestowed each year on some individual whose service to baseball has been outstanding over a long period of years.

The quiet, pleasant young man from Greta, La. thus joins a long list of notables that includes Babe Ruth, Wilbert Robinson, Connie Mack, Miller Huggins, Walter Johnson, Judge Landis, Bill Klem, Frankie Frisch, John McGraw, Walter Maravich, Travis Jackson and Ed Barrow.

Ott has never known any baseball home except the Polo Grounds. He was sent to the late John McGraw by a wealthy lumberman friend in 1925 when he was only 16 years old. He came up from a semi-pro team listed as a catcher but after taking one look at him hitting, McGraw immediately converted him into an outfielder.

Since then he has patrolled the outfield with occasional incursions into the infield when necessity arose. He has been one of the outstanding outfielders of the game and his lifetime batting average is .313. He is the National League's home run king and has hit 415 round trippers which is the league record. He also holds a modern league record of scoring six times in one game. And he holds the field record of sharing in 12 double plays in one season.

Ott has never been a bit of trouble to the Giants. He has been a model young man all through his playing career. He has had little to say on the field but he always made his presence felt with his brilliant fielding and great slugging.

He will celebrate his 33rd birthday March 2 but, he is married and the father of two children, he doesn't look much older than the day he arrived from the South 17 years ago.

The baseball experts believe he will make just as capable a manager as he has a player and he still is able to hold his own both at bat and afield.

out the team at guards. Despite its recent showing, Coach Olsen is strangely optimistic and believes his squad will have a chance to hit the victory trail. He doesn't think too strongly on the subject but he does have hope.

Red and Black Invades Mt. Vernon; Moon is Out

The basketball season is one bit of tough luck after another for Circleville's hard-pressed Tigers.

The team has not been able to get clicking, despite the fact that it did show improvement Tuesday evening in losing to Washington C. H., 33-35, but that game put Bob Moon on the sidelines for a couple more weeks.

The tall guard broke a bone in his wrist when he crashed into the brick wall at the north end of the court in trying to stop a play. A Berger Hospital x-ray disclosed the fracture. Moon, a senior, had missed several games earlier because of a twisted ankle.

Bob Kline, a forward, returned to the squad Friday after being ill for over a week.

McCLAIN DEFEATS BLUE LION FIVE IN 44-26 EVENT

Greenfield McClain kept going in South Central Ohio League competition Friday evening by defeating Washington C. H. Blue Lions, 44-26. Don Grate paced the Greenfield attack, as he usually does.

Ellies, Blue Lion center who scored 14 points against Circleville Tigers Tuesday evening, went scoreless. He was tossed from the game with Jim Orr, Greenfield guard, in the second period for roughing it up a little too strenuously.

The game was the only one played in the SCO, Wilmington taking a 42-16 thumping at the hands of Xenia Central, and Hillsboro being blasted 25-15 by Hamilton Central Catholic.

Circleville was idle.

The Walnut boys grabbed a 15-5 lead at the half by scoring 14 points in the last four minutes of the second quarter, but they bogged down in the last two cantos to make the game close. Return of Wright and Dewey to the Deercreek team helped that outfit considerably. As usual, Walnut's scoring was evenly divided, while Schein and Wright split honors for Williamsport.

Washington moved over to Monroe to cop a rough one, leading all the way but being forced to play ball. The Monroe team trailed by only five points at the halftime, 12-17, but couldn't stand the pace in the last half. Werten and Rife did most of Washington's scoring.

Salt Creek was held to a 15-15 score at the half over at Atlanta, but the Perry boys started to foul out in the third period and fell behind from there on. Salt Creek completed 13 free tosses to help boost its score. Jones with 19 and Spencer with 13 accounted for most of the winner's scoring.

Cramer Hits 33
New Holland took on the fast Jeffersonville team on the Bulldog court and dropped a thriller by only three points. With a minute to go the score was tied at 40-40, but Jeffersonville added a free toss and a bucket to clinch the affray. Cramer, six foot five inch forward of the Jeffersonville team, scored 13 field goals and seven free tosses for 33 points. The halftime found New Holland ahead 29-25.

Games scheduled next Friday include New Holland at Williamsport, Monroe at Walnut, Salt Creek at Darby, Perry at Ashville and Jackson at Washington.

ROBINSON PUTS ZIVIC ON MAT

Harlem Clouter After Title Contest With Red Cochran

By Jack Singer

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The only thing that has been able to whip Ray (Sugar) Robinson is the gripe—and if given a return bout, Harlem's sensational punching pinwheel would be a cinch to knock out the bum.

If Welterweight Champion Freddie (Red) Cochran, of the United States Navy, is smart, he will take the next boat for the Philippines. He is a lot less likely to get hurt fighting those stumblers, the Japs, than climbing into the same ring with Mr. Robinson on the night of February 20.

The precocious Harlem hep cat, who won't be 21 until next May, gave a remarkable exhibition of paralyzing punching and cunning boxing in stopping Fritzie Zivic, the flat-nosed Pittsburgh museum piece, in 31 seconds of the tenth round of a scheduled 12-round contest last night in Madison Square Garden. It was Robinson's 27th consecutive victory since he entered the pay-to-slay ranks in October, 1940, and his twenty-first knockout in 27 fights. If all his opponents were laid end to end, they'd look natural.

Before the bout, Herman (Muggsy) Taylor, the Philadelphia promoter, vainly sought an injunction to stop Robinson from going through with the fight. After the first round, Zivic was sorry Taylor didn't succeed. Dropping every round but the seventh before he finally dropped himself, the antiquated Fritzie thought he'd run into a hive of wasps, all wearing boxing gloves.

Midway through the ninth round, the lethal-punching Negro fired a whistling right cross to the jaw which spun Zivic around and sent him pitching forward on his face, his head buried in the canvas like an ostrich.

His eyes as glassy as his jaw, Zivic climbed to one knee at the count of three looking as if he'd fallen into a flour barrel. The entire left side of his head was smeared with resin dust. He tottered to his feet at the count of nine, and it was obvious that the rubber shortage hadn't affected Fritzie. He had plenty in his legs.

The bell saved Zivic in the ninth, but Robinson surged out for the tenth, pinned the woozy veteran against the ropes and hammered him mercilessly with a two-fisted leather barrage. Zivic slowly sank to his knees, his back resting against the bottom rope.

Referee Arthur Donovan didn't even bother to count, stopping the scrap, although Zivic, in full possession of his mental faculties, could have arisen to resume the hopeless struggle against his younger and faster foe.

From the opening bell until the stunning finish the crowd of 15,475, which contributed a gross gate of $45,054, breathlessly waited for Zivic to open up. But all he did was cover up. The Pittsburgh ring larceny didn't have anything but his old age insurance.

Robinson punched too fast and moved too fast, and except for the seventh round, in which Zivic hurt the flashy youngster with a sharp right to the body, Fritzie couldn't find his opponent with a submanine detector.

MEL OTT RATES NOD AS SPORTS "MAN OF WEEK"

By International News Service

One of the grandest little fellows in all the world of sport—Melvin Ott, newly created manager of the Giants—draws the little brass ring this week for winning the New York Baseball Writers Annual award bestowed each year on some individual whose service to baseball has been outstanding over a long period of years.

The quiet, pleasant young man from Gretna, La., thus joins a long list of notables that includes Babe Ruth, Wilbert Robinson, Connie Mack, Miller Huggins, Walter Johnson, Judge Landis, Bill Klem, Frankie Frisch, John McGraw, Walter Marandino, Travis Jackson and Ed Barrow.

Ott has never known any baseball home except the Polo Grounds. He was sent to the late John McGraw by a wealthy lumberman friend in 1925 when he was only 16 years old. He came up from a semi-pro team listed as a catcher but after taking one look at him hitting, McGraw immediately converted him into an outfielder.

Since then he has patrolled the outfield with occasional incursions into the infield when necessity arose. He has been one of the outstanding outfielders of the game and his lifetime batting average is .313. He is the National League's home run king and has hit 415 round trippers which is the league record. He also holds a modern league record of scoring six times in one game. And he holds the field record of sharing in 12 double plays in one season.

Ott has never been a bit of trouble to the Giants. He has been a model young man all through his playing career. He has had little to say on the field but he always made his presence felt with his brilliant fielding and great slugging.

He will celebrate his 33rd birthday March 2 but, he is married and the father of two children, he doesn't look much older than the day he arrived from the South 17 years ago.

The baseball experts believe he will make just as capable a manager as he has a player and he still is able to hold his own both at bat and afield.

Dramatic Highlights in Cooking School Programs

In past years, the Herald Cooking School has established a reputation for entertaining and dramatic programs wherever it has been presented. This year's programs are no exception. In fact, this year's presentations are enlivened more than ever with drama and dialogue. The programs are keyed to the theme of the times—one of national defense and patriotism. In spite of their informal conversational style, they are packed full of timely, important information in which every American homemaker will be tremendously interested. Pictured here are a few of the dramatic situations which develop throughout the programs, which will be presented in Memorial Hall, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons, January 21, 22, 23.

Red and Black Invades Mt. Vernon; Moon is Out

By International News Service

The basketball season is one bit of tough luck after another for Circleville's hard-pressed Tigers. The team has not been able to get clicking, despite the fact that it did show improvement Tuesday evening in losing to Washington C. H. 33-35, but that game put Bob Moon on the sidelines for a couple more weeks.

The tall guard broke a bone in his wrist when he crashed into the brick wall at the north end of the court in trying to stop a play. A Berger Hospital x-ray disclosed the fracture. Moon, a senior, had missed several games earlier because of a twisted ankle.

Bob Kline, a forward, returned to the squad Friday after being ill for over a week.

Gerald Ayers, one of last year's stars who has been out all season with a cracked bone above the knee, is expected to start drilling

Monday evening and may be in the lineup soon. Ayers is one of

District Evangelical Rally To Be Held in Circleville on March 12

Bishop George E. Epp Of Central Area To Be Chief Speaker

Evangelistic campaign for Calvary Evangelical Church will include a district rally of Evangelical churches of Pickaway, Franklin and Fairfield Counties to be held in Circleville on March 12.

Leading speaker for the day will be Bishop George E. Epp, bishop of the Central Area. This will be Bishop Epp's first visit to Circleville in a number of years. He is stationed at Naperville, Illinois.

Evangelistic services at the church will open March 8 and continue through March 22. The evangelist will be the Rev. Clifton J. Robinson of Cleveland. The Rev. W. D. Ramsey will be host pastor.

A special evening service will be held at Calvary Evangelical Church Sunday when the Rev. E. E. Nietz, district superintendent of the Southern District of the Ohio Conference, conducts a Communion service. The service will begin at 7:30.

Sunday morning sermon topic of the Rev. Mr. Ramsey will be "Sanctification, What It Is and How to Experience It."

Church Briefs

Holy Communion will be observed at First Methodist Church Sunday with the Rev. Neil Peterson in charge. The Communion meditation will be "That They May Be Made Perfect," and the anthem will be "Teach Me Thy Way" by Heyser. The Youth Fellowship of the church will meet at 6:30 p. m.

"Youth Embattled for Christ" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. George Troutman at Trinity Lutheran Church Sunday morning. His evening subject will be "Solomon's Choice a Wise One." Lutheran meetings for next week are Thursday, Junior Choir practice at 7 p. m., Lutheran Brotherhood at 7:30 p. m.; Friday, teachers' meeting at 6:45 p. m., Senior Choir practice at 7:15 p. m.; Saturday, Catechetical instruction at 10 a. m.

Revival services will begin at the Church of the Brethren Sunday evening, lasting through January 31. Meetings will be directed by the mission board, church members and the pastor.

Miss Abbe Mills Clarke, organist of First Presbyterian Church, will present an old Wagnerian program Sunday morning in the numbers which she will play as a part of the worship service. Her numbers will include "The Prize Song" from "Die Meistersinger," "Dreams," and "March" from "Die Meistersinger." With Mrs. Clark will direct, the Presbyterian Choir will sing the anthem "Light of the World" by Brackett. "Christian Priorities" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. Robert T. Kelsey, the church pastor.

John the Baptist and Jesus

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 1-17

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 18 is Matt. 3:1-17; Mark 1:1-11; Luke 3:1-22, the Golden Text being Luke 3:22, "Thou art My Beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased.")

WE HAVE learned all we can know of the childhood of Jesus. We know nothing of the youth of John the Baptist, those two who were second cousins, you remember, because their mothers were first cousins, and whose lives, so far as we know, never crossed until they were grown men.

Today we learn when and how they met and what they did. John the Baptist was a remarkable man, a real prophet, who prepared the wilderness for a home and very simple food—locusts and wild honey, we are told. Locusts are part of the poor man's food in the East today. They are not at all like our locusts. His dress was equally simple, a camel's hair garment, the cloth being coarse and woven of camel's hair—still worn in the East. A girdle was almost an indispensable part of the common dress of the day. It was needed to bind the long, loose robe.

John must have been a striking figure. He made no pretensions of being other than he was—in Isaiah's words:

"The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make ye ready the way of the Lord, Make His paths straight. Every valley shall be filled, And every mountain and hill shall be brought low; And the crooked shall be made straight, And the rough ways smooth, And all flesh shall see the salvation of God."

Multitudes Came to Hear
Multitudes of people came from their homes to hear this striking man with the interesting message. It may have been that these crowds sensed that something unusual was about to take place. They knew John made them feel they were living sinfully and should do something about it.

PRESBYTERIAN MEN MEET TUESDAY AT 6:30 O'CLOCK

The Presbyterian Men's Club will meet Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. in the church for a dinner to be served by Division 1 of the Ladies' Aid and a program that will follow.

Music will be provided by the chorus of Circleville Lodge of Elks and an address on "Current Events" will be offered by Tom Armstrong of the high school faculty.

The committee in charge includes Melvin Yates, Fred Moeller and T. M. Glick.

Leslie May is president of the brotherhood.

REPORT OF SURVEY TO BE SENT TO COUNTIANS

The Pickaway County Ministerial Association will mail to every boxholder in the county early next week a report of its survey of Sunday school and church attendance in the city and county schools.

Pastors of the Association are using the method as a means of informing city and county residents of the need for Sunday school and church attendance among the young people.

The letter is headed "An All Out Program of National De-

John the Baptist and Jesus

John the Baptist baptized in the river Jordan the multitude of people who came to hear him preach and receive baptism.

Farming in Southern Ohio

BY THOMAS E. BEERY

Keep The Hogs Happy

That's a suggestion that I got this week from a very successful farmer, that is sound and timely; for when we have so much cold weather and snow, following an open winter, it is hard on the hogs; for they can't get out to get green feed, and they tend to spend too much time in the hog houses.

Feeding some shock corn, every day, some distances from the hog houses, or some legume hay, is one of the very best ways to keep the hogs happy and contented and active, during their working day a friend says. I tried this when I came home and found my hogs piled up bed, when it was only about five o'clock, and they had evidently planned to stay right there until daylight the next day, which at this time of the year is about seven o'clock—about 14 hours in bed, with a need of some feed in this interval. They were low in spirits, too; anyone could see that.

I went to the barn and got some alfalfa hay and they were up in a minute and ate every straw, and had a good time doing it. Then I expected them to be thirsty, so I took them some warm water and they drank it, and had some more fun arranging a new supply of baled straw for their bed. I didn't break the bales up much but let the hogs do it, for they had plenty of time and I knew they would like the experience, and they did.

I am glad to pass on this advice and experience to our readers of this column, many of whom are feeding some hogs or wintering some stockers. Just a little extra attention given to them, every day, will pay well in increased gains. It will do much to prevent sickness, too, for a contented hog that is getting plenty of feed and water, and that has a balanced ration and a comfortable bed, is not very apt to be sick.

One of the things that needs attention, oftener than one might think is the bedding. It will pay to make additions to it, at least once a week, and to change it, whenever it gets damp. Baled straw is very good for this, for it isn't damp, like that in the rack.

Water For Laying Hens

I was on a farm this week, when I found the owner and operator in the hen house. What do you suppose he was doing in there? He was adding some more warm water to the supply for the day, and checking on the water heater, so as to be sure it was working all right.

"When the cold weather came this flock went down a lot in production, even though they had the best of care," he said. "Thinking that they might not be getting enough water, I installed a water heater, and then added some extra warm water in containers, during the day, and they 'snapped right out of it,' and now they are laying more than they did before the cold weather came," he pointed out; "So it must have been the water that put the egg production down" he continued.

This needs no comment, but it is a timely suggestion.

Good Poultry Rations

I have checked on a lot of them and an all mash ration, fed in self feeders, with grain in the litter in the evening, seems to be the most popular combination. Many farmers are using home grains too, and having their feed dealer mix the protein supplement with them, instead of trying to do this themselves, for it is very hard to get a good mix at home.

Wintering Stock Hogs

I got some good suggestions about wintering stock hogs this week from Fred Caplinger, New

Vienna, RFD 2, who is wintering 80 in one bunch.

"How do you do it and have so many together?" I asked Mr. Caplinger.

"Our method is simple," he said. "We don't have that many in one hog house, but they sleep in several A-type hog houses, some distance apart in the field, where they were farrowed," he explained. "They all eat at the same self feeders, but they sleep in many different nests."

I learned that these A-type nests were the ones in which the pigs were born and when the time came to wean them their mothers were taken from them, instead of taking the pigs away from the mothers, and they continued sleeping in the A-house in which they were born, with some visiting back and forth, but not very much.

It was a very cold day when I called, and some of the pigs were in the nests, and a few had evidently gone visiting, for the day, but there wasn't much crowding.

"You may wonder why we have these pigs out in the field instead of around the barn, where they would be warmer, but we have found that they don't do as well in the barn, as they do out in a field and in the individual A-type houses," Mr. Caplinger said. "They get a cough and some of them get off feed, but they don't do this if we let them 'rough it' a little as we are doing this winter, and keep them away from the barn," he added. "We can feed them in stables in the barn after they weigh about 100 to 125 pounds and get along all right with them, but we have trouble if they are brought into the barn sooner."

The Winter Ration

This was simple; just ground corn and a 40% supplement in self feeders, with some ear corn fed on the ground. I noticed that there was plenty of water near the feeders, too.

Home Made Self Feeders

I saw some good ones at this farm that didn't cost very much. They were made from rough lumber, but they were very satisfactory. "Do you see how that feeder is made?" Mr. Caplinger asked. "First we make a sled about four feet wide, and put a good solid top on it; and then the uprights, for the feeding box are nailed on at the ends." That briefly describes the feeders used, that are very satisfactory and about as good as an expensive one that you would buy on the market.

I noticed that one of the feeders had a metal covering on the top of the shed, so the feed would move out easier, but this is not necessary.

The Farm Organization

This is a father and sons partnership. Fred Caplinger and his

Rotation

This is corn, wheat and clover. The clover is sowed early in February or March, with very good results much better than if it is sowed later in the year.

Combine

This firm is sold on a combine. They haven't had a grass failure since they have been using it, for the straw distributed evenly on the fields gives some protection by shading during a drought, and probably helps to conserve some moisture; anyway, the grass get through a drought all right, which is another argument for a combine.

District Evangelical Rally To Be Held in Circleville on March 12

Bishop George E. Epp Of Central Area To Be Chief Speaker

Evangelistic campaign for Calvary Evangelical Church will include a district rally of Evangelical churches of Pickaway, Franklin and Fairfield Counties to be held in Circleville on March 12.

Leading speaker for the day will be Bishop George E. Epp, bishop of the Central Area. This will be Bishop Epp's first visit to Circleville in a number of years. He is stationed at Naperville, Illinois.

Evangelistic services at the church will open March 8 and continue through March 22. The evangelist will be the Rev. Clifford J. Robinson of Cleveland. The Rev. W. D. Ramsey will be host pastor.

A special evening service will be held at Calvary Evangelical Church Sunday when the Rev. E. E. Nietz, district superintendent of the Southern District of the Ohio Conference, conducts a Communion service. The service will begin at 7:30.

Sunday morning sermon topic of the Rev. Mr. Ramsey will be "Sanctification, What It Is and How to Experience It."

Church Briefs

Holy Communion will be observed at First Methodist Church Sunday with the Rev. Neil Peterson in charge. The Communion meditation will be "That They May Be Made Perfect," and the anthem will be "Teach Me Thy Way" by Heyser. The Youth Fellowship of the church will meet at 6:30 p. m.

"Youth Embattled for Christ" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. George Troutman at Trinity Lutheran Church Sunday morning. His evening subject will be "Solomon's Choice a Wise One." Lutheran meetings for next week are Thursday, Junior Choir practice at 7 p. m.; Friday, teachers' meeting at 6:45 p. m.; Senior Choir practice at 7:15 p. m.; Saturday, Catechetical instruction at 10 a. m.

Revival services will begin at the Church of the Brethren Sunday evening, lasting through January 31. Meetings will be directed by the mission board, church members and the pastor.

Miss Abbe Mills Clarke, organist of First Presbyterian Church, will present an all Wagnerian program Sunday morning in the numbers which she will play as a part of the worship service. Her numbers will include "The Prize Song" from "Die Meistersinger," "Dreams," and "March" from "Die Meistersinger." With Mrs. Clark will direct, the Presbyterian Choir will sing the anthem "Light of the World" by Brackett. "Christian Priorities" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. Robert T. Kelsey, the church pastor.

John the Baptist and Jesus

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 1-17

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 18 is Matt. 3:1-17; Mark 1:1-11; Luke 3:1-22, the Golden Text being Luke 3:22, "Thou art My Beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased.")

WE HAVE learned all we can know of the childhood of Jesus. We know nothing of the youth of John the Baptist, those two who were second cousins, you remember, because their mothers were first cousins, and whose lives, so far as we know, never crossed until they were grown men.

Today we learn when and how they met and what they did. John the Baptist was a remarkable man, a real prophet, who preferred the wilderness for a home and very simple food—locusts and wild honey, we are told. Locusts are part of the poor man's food in the East today. They are not at all like our locusts. His dress was equally simple, a camel's hair garment, the cloth being coarse and woven of camel's hair—still worn in the East. A girdle was almost an indispensable part of the common dress of the day. It was needed to bind the long, loose robe.

John must have been a striking figure. He made no pretensions of being other than he was—in Isaiah's words:

"The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make ye ready the way of the Lord. Make His paths straight. Every valley shall be filled. And every mountain and hill shall be brought low; And the crooked shall be made straight. And the rough ways smooth. And all flesh shall see the salvation of God."

Multitudes Came to Hear
Multitudes of people came from their homes to hear this striking man with the interesting message. It may have been that these crowds sensed that something unusual was about to take place. They knew John made them feel they were living sinfully and should do something about it.

Many may have thought that if they could get him to baptize them they would be saved. John dispelled that idea, however. He knew their guilt, that they were dishonest, crafters, cruel, selfish, and he told them plainly that baptism was not enough. It was but a symbol of a change which should make them live good lives.

"What shall we do?" they asked him. To the publicans, noted grafters, he said that they should collect no more than was due them. To the soldiers, that they should use no violence, should not accuse anyone falsely, and be content with their wages.

He was not Christ, he told them, who were wondering, "One mightier than I cometh, the latchet (strings) of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose; He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire."

All three of the disciples—Matthew, Mark and Luke—tell of Jesus coming to John to be baptized. Matthew says John forbade the Lord at first, saying he had much more need to be baptized of Jesus. But Jesus insisted, so there, in the river Jordan, Jesus was baptized by John, and immediately after coming from the water, He saw the heavens open and the Spirit of God descended like a dove, lighting upon Him. "And lo, a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art My Beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased."

St. Luke says that Jesus was 30 years of age at this time. He also tells us that Herod, the tetrarch or ruler, having been reproved by John for his evil doings, and especially for taking his brother Philip's wife, Herodias, shut John in prison. He never left this prison, you remember, but was beheaded through a conspiracy by Herodias and her daughter, Salome.

John fulfilled the prophecy of the angel who appeared to his father, Zacharias, "Many of the children of Israel shall be turned to the Lord their God." He also fulfilled the prophecy of Zacharias himself who, when his dumbness passed, said: "And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare His ways."

fense," the pastors contending "it takes both patriotism and spirituality to win for America."

The letter contains statistics compiled from the survey made in the city and county schools. The figures show that of a total of 4,995 pupils questioned, 1,452 of them attended Sunday school and 1,371 attended church. Seventy-three percent of them did not attend church, according to the survey.

WILLIAMSPORT

A covered dish dinner was enjoyed by the teachers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Boyer, Wednesday evening. The dining room table was centered with a silver fruit bowl containing fruit. On either side of the bowl were crystal candle holders with white tapers.

Those enjoying the affair were Mr. and Mrs. James Dilley of Circleville, Orville Daley of Columbus, Misses Jean Journey, Alice Rardin, Margaret Smith, Twila West, Ruth Becker, Helen West, Mrs. Ida Ware and Maurice Lowks.

The evening was spent in playing cards and since it was a postponed Christmas party gifts were exchanged.

Williamsport—Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Heiskell and Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Campbell attended the Red Cross luncheon in Circleville Monday.

Williamsport—Mr. and Mrs. George Bochart visited Tuesday evening with O. S. Bookwalter of Kingston who is a patient at Grant Hospital in Columbus.

Williamsport—Mrs. Paul Queen and children of East San Francisco, Calif., returned to their home Sunday after visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Dean Godden for several days.

Williamsport—Beverly Ann Hurley of Five Points was the weekend guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Heiskell.

Williamsport—Drexel Le May of Patterson Field, Dayton, was the week end guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George LeMay. Mr. and Mrs. LeMay accompanied him to Dayton on Sunday.

Keep The Hogs Happy

That's a suggestion that I got this week from a very successful farmer, that is sound and timely; for when we have so much cold weather and snow, following an open winter, it is hard on the hogs; for they can't get out to get green feed, and they tend to spend too much time in the hog houses.

I tried this when I came home and found my hogs piled up bed, when it was only about five o'clock, and they had evidently planned to stay right there until daylight the next day, which at this time of the year is about seven o'clock—about 14 hours in bed, with a need of some feed in this interval. They were low in spirits, too; anyone could see that.

I went to the barn and got some alfalfa hay and they were up in a minute and ate every straw, and had a good time doing it. Then I expected them to be thirsty, so I took them some warm water and they drank it, and had some more fun arranging a new supply of haled straw for their bed. I didn't break the bales up much but let the hogs do it, for they had plenty of time and I knew they would like the experience, and they did.

I am glad to pass on this advice and experience to our readers of this column, many of whom are feeding some hogs or wintering some stockers. Just a little extra attention given to them, every day, will pay well in increased gains. It will do much to prevent sickness, too, for a contented hog that is getting plenty of feed and water, and that has a balanced ration and a comfortable bed, is not very apt to be sick.

One of the things that needs attention, oftener than one might think is the bedding. It will pay to make additions to it, at least once a week, and to change it, whenever it gets damp. Baled straw is very good for this, for it isn't damp, like that in the rack.

Water For Laying Hens

I was on a farm this week, when I found the owner and operator in the hen house. What do you suppose he was doing in there? He was adding some more warm water to the supply for the day, and checking on the water heater, so as to be sure it was working all right.

"When the cold weather came this flock went down a lot in production, even though they had the best of care," he said. "Thinking that they might not be getting enough water, I installed a water heater, and then added some extra warm water in containers, during the day, and they 'snapped right out of it,' and now they are laying more than they did before the cold weather came," he pointed out. "So it must have been the water that put the egg production down" he continued.

This needs no comment, but it is a timely suggestion.

Good Poultry Rations

I have checked on a lot of them and an all mash ration, fed in self feeders, with grain in the litter in the evening, seems to be the most popular combination. Many farmers are using home grains too, and having their feed dealer mix the protein supplement with them, instead of trying to do this themselves, for it is very hard to get a good mix at home.

Wintering Stock Hogs

I got some good suggestions about wintering stock hogs this week from Fred Caplinger, New

Vienna, RFD 2, who is wintering 80 in one bunch.

"How do you do it and have so many together?" I asked Mr. Caplinger.

"Our method is simple", he said. "We don't have that many in one hog house, but they sleep in several A-type hog houses, some distance apart in the field, where they were farrowed," he explained. "They all eat at the same self feeders, but they sleep in many different nests."

I learned that these A-type nests were the ones in which the pigs were born and when the time came to wean them their mothers were taken from them, instead of taking the pigs away from the mothers, and they continued sleeping in the A-house in which they were born, with some visiting back and forth, but not very much.

It was a very cold day when I called, and some of the pigs were in the nests, and a few had evidently gone visiting, for the day, but there wasn't much crowding.

"You may wonder why we have these pigs out in the field instead of around the barn, where they would be warmer, but we have found that they don't do as well in the barn, as they do out in a field and in the individual A-type houses", Mr. Caplinger said. "They get a cough and some of them get off feed, but they don't do this if we let them 'rough it' a little as we are doing this winter, and keep them away from the barn", he added. "We can feed them in stables in the barn after they weigh about 100 to 125 pounds and get along all right with them, but we have trouble if they are brought into the barn sooner."

ONE WEEK'S FOOD

CONFIDENT by questions of housewives who want to do what's right, but don't know how to draw the line between hoarding and wise foresight, the food administrator said it would be good for every home to have food for four days on hand. A supply to last four days to a week is not only allowable but advised; more is neither wise nor necessary. Items like flour, bought habitually in units lasting more than a week, are properly still purchased that way. But the family used to buying flour by the eighth-barrel—a bag of 24½ pounds—should buy its one bag, not two. Buy sugar by the usual five or ten pounds—not twenty.

Families differ not only in size but in needs and buying habits. Probably the silliest, most expensive and wasteful method is to buy half a pound of sugar and half a pound of butter today, and go back and do the same tomorrow. RIO DE JANEIRO — If this Pan-American conference succeeds in lining up the Americas against the Axis — and with one exception it looks as if it will—Messrs. Hitler and Hirohito will have Undersecretary Sumner Welles and Brazilian Foreign Minister Aranha largely to thank.

These are the two men who have carried the ball for a united Pan-American war front, with President Vargas giving them potent 100 percent support in the background.

Strangely enough no two men could be more dissimilar. Oswaldo Aranha is an ex-gauche from the cattle country of Brazil, accustomed to appearing at horse races with two revolvers strapped to his belt, and equally at home around a roulette table or a dinner in the presidential palace.

Undersecretary of State Welles, on the other hand, had Roosevelt's background of Groton and Harvard, had the same godmother as Eleanor Roosevelt, was a page at the Roosevelt's wedding, and is an Anthony Eden edition of what the well-dressed diplomat is supposed to look like.

Underneath his somewhat austere exterior, however, Sumner Welles is just as much the human being as Oswaldo Aranha, and together they make a perfect team of resourceful, hard-hitting Hitler-Hirohito haters.

FATHER OF GOOD NEIGHBORS

Not many people realize it, but in South America, Welles is known as the father of Roosevelt's Good Neighbor policy — now recognized almost universally as the soundest foreign program put forward by any American president in half a century.

It was Sumner Welles who, when High Commissioner to the Dominican Republic way far back in the Coolidge Administration, persuaded Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State, to withdraw the Marines. This was the first step in getting U. S. troops out of the Caribbean area, always a source of suspicion to every Latin-American nation.

It was Welles also who wrote the famous Central American treaties during the Coolidge Administration by which revolutionary governments were denied recognition. His purpose was to prevent upstart military leaders from seizing control of the banana republics every few months. However, neither the Central Americans nor Calvin Coolidge were quite ready for this advanced stage of peace and good neighborliness, with the result that Welles resigned, and Coolidge sent the Marines back into Nicaragua.

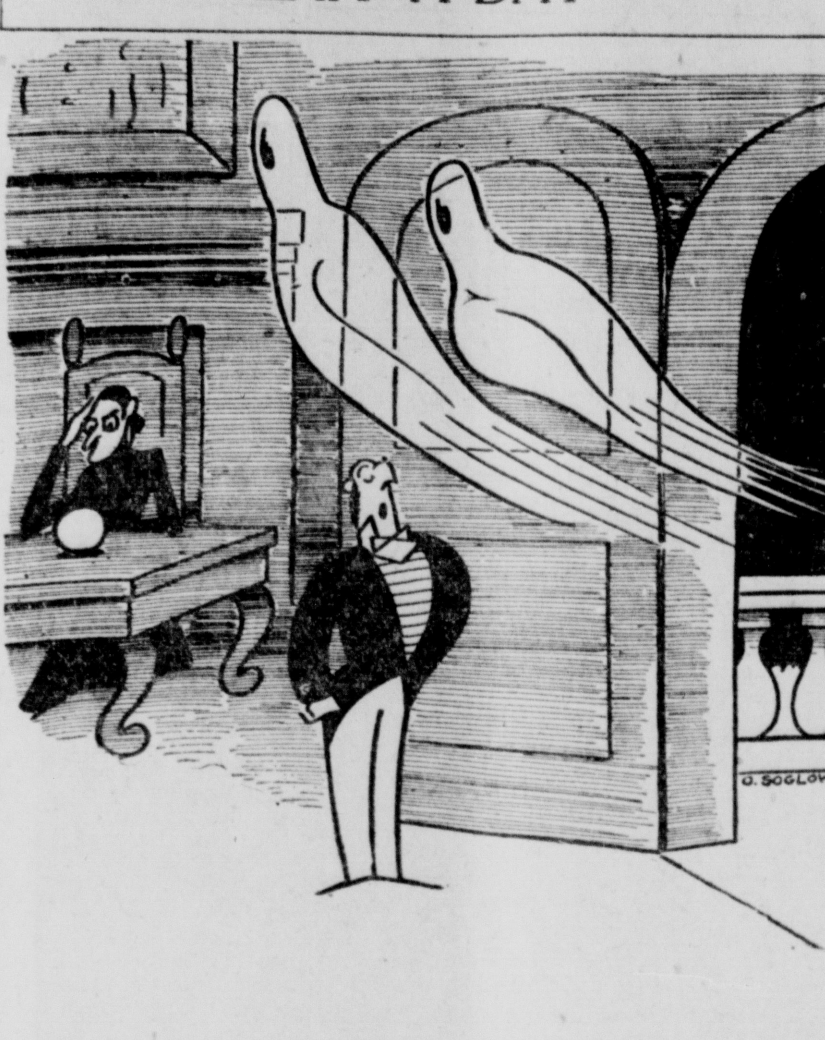

Welles waited patiently all during the Hoover Administration toward the end of which he put in a lot of political punches for the election of his boyhood friend Franklin Roosevelt. And not generally known is that Welles chiefly wrote the foreign affairs planks in the Democratic platform adopted at the 1932 Chicago convention.

Welles' record for constantly pounding the Good Neighbor policy needs no

Use Handkerchiefs to Prevent Spread of Colds

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
"HOW far that little candle throws its beam," to quote the Bard, could be applied to coughing and sneezing in this kind of weather: "How far that little sneeze throws its particles, so far

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

is spread a good cold in a naughty world."

We were astonished a few years ago to find out how far a sneeze carries. This was demonstrated by the work of Professor M. W. Johnson and Professor H. E. Edger-ton at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. They took three hundred high speed photographs at exposures of 1/15,000 of a second of a number of sneezers.

The droplets which were cast out from the nose and throat, showed up plainly on the photographic plates. The sneeze can expel droplets with a velocity as high as 150 feet a second, or more than 100 miles an hour. A bullet from a regular .38-caliber revolver leaves the barrel of the revolver with a speed of about 630 feet a second.

Sneeze Droplets
The droplets from a sneeze are from 1/16 to less than 1/150 of an inch in diameter and evaporate quickly, but they leave solid nuclei of germs which take several days to settle to the ground. A sneeze can carry these particles as far as twelve feet.

Now this points out the fact that one of the great and important agents in preventive medicine is the pocket handkerchief. For the sake of everyone in the surrounding neighborhood, if you are going to sneeze and cough, get your pocket handkerchief, or at least your hand, in front of your nose and throat. If you are having a cold, you had better provide yourself with some gauze squares which you can use in this way and burn afterwards.

We are advised all the time during the cold season to avoid people with colds. This is easier said than done since all but one-sixth of the population have colds during this season of the year.

Prevent Spreading Colds

The burden of prevention of a cold, lies with the fellow who has it. If he will employ the simple measures which go with the use of the pocket handkerchief, he will be able to prevent contamination of the atmosphere.

There is no antiseptic nose spray or mouth wash which will render your nasal secretions and droplets harmless if you have a cold, so do not depend upon them as soon as you get a cold. To a certain extent you are the guardian of the public health, and you should set yourself up as a health officer to prevent giving your cold to other people in the office, in the home and in the theater.

It has been said that everybody is advised to go to bed with a cold, but the fact is that about ninety per cent of cold sufferers go to the movies. To give up the movies is another piece of self-denial that you could use in order to be a good and patriotic citizen.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. B.:—"Is there any effective treatment for chronic mastitis in a woman of forty? Is there danger of more serious trouble following, such as cancer?"

Answer: Chronic mastitis is a chronic inflammation of the breast, probably the commonest disease to which the breast is subject—particularly at your age. It is often mistaken for cancer, but I do not believe it ever turns into cancer if it is not cancer, I do not believe any serious consequences are likely to follow.

No Refuge from Love

JERRY BRONDFIELD

SYNOPSIS

MOLLA GLENDON comes to New York, seeking refuge from the war that has swept across her native Norway, and from the bombs that shattered London, where she had fled from Oslo. She goes to work in the office of the Whitworth Construction company.

BURTON WHITWORTH, head of the company, was a friend of her deceased father. Molla meets TAYLOR WHITWORTH, handsome and dashing son of Burton, and NEIL LUNDQUIST, young field engineer of the company.

KURT WILHELM, escapee from a Canadian internment camp, appears in New York to bedevil Molla.

YESTERDAY: Molla reveals to Neil how she is bedeviled by Kurt, how she does not dare to tell the police because of her family in Oslo.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

NEIL STEERED Tay Whitworth and his father into the library after dinner that night. "I was going to keep this to myself for a while," he said abruptly, "but on second thought this matter is very much your concern and you've a right to know about it."

Burton Whitworth raised an inquiring eyebrow. "Shoot."

"Maybe that's the word we'll need, too," Neil said.

He told them the story of Kurt Wilhelm. When he had finished Burton Whitworth was pacing the floor nervously, his hands behind his back.

Tay looked at Neil queerly. He started to say something, changed his mind and lit a cigaret.

The elder Whitworth was silent for a long minute before he spoke. Then he plumped a fist into his other palm.

"There's only one thing to do at present. We can't go to the police, but there's no reason why we can't have a private detective sort of keep an eye on Molla until we think of a better way to handle this. What do you think, Neil?"

"As good an idea as any," Neil agreed. "We'll have to take it easy until he tips his hand."

"I don't want to intrude on the brain trust, but would you be interested in my slant, Dad?"

His father looked up quickly. "Oh—oh, of course."

Tay ground his cigaret into an ash tray. "Maybe this is the time to insist on Molla's staying here for a while. She'd be a lot safer, don't you think?"

"She'd be safer," Neil agreed, "but I don't think it would be as smart as the other plan. If she stayed here it would take Wilhelm just that much longer to give us an idea of what he's up to. I don't think Molla's in any personal danger yet, and until we find out what he has in store for her, I think we ought to give him all the rope he wants."

"Maybe you're right, Neil," Burton Whitworth murmured. "Meanwhile, we'd better tell her we're on her side and perhaps give her her choice."

"I'll tell her," Tay said quickly. "I'll take her to lunch tomorrow. The only thing I won't mention is the private detective."

"I was going to, but just as you wish," his father told him. "Maybe it would be more apropos, at that," he smiled.

Tay leaned forward over the table and took Molla's hand.

"Come, now, don't be obstinate. You know it's the best thing for you, and certainly the safest."

"I cannot argue with you any longer," Molla said wearily. "You wear me down so. I'll tell you what I'll do—I'll compromise with you."

He smiled. "Now we're getting somewhere."

"He—Kurt is out of the city now. I have no doubt that he will demand to see me when he returns. Until then I will remain in New York. After that I will come out to your place."

She ran a pensive finger around the rim of her water glass. "But I warn you I will stay not one minute longer than I have to."

He looked at her quickly. "You have an idea you're not going to be as happy there, haven't you? And I'll bet it's because you think my mother doesn't like the idea."

She shrugged. "Let's not go into that."

"Okay, but there's one question I want to ask you, if you don't mind." He leaned forward again, a slight smile on his face.

"Why was it you didn't come to me first, instead of to Neil Lundquist, when you felt as though you had to tell your troubles to someone?"

Her eyes opened a little wider with surprise. She tried to piece her scrambled thoughts together for a definite answer, but she couldn't find one.

"Why—why, I don't know. I guess it was just because he was the one I was with at the moment and I knew he could be trusted. He—he's awfully nice."

Tay nodded. "Yes—Neil's a swell gent, but I thought—" He smiled again. "I kind of thought I had earned some sort of prior rights on your attentions."

Molla's heart took an extra heavy thump a couple of times. There was no mistaking his feelings. Tay was just a little jealous. A tinge of coolness crept into Molla's tone. "You're not really objecting, are you?"

The carefree grin broke over his face again. "Nope. Not yet, anyway."

"You'll give me warning when you do, won't you?" she smiled.

"Not very much," he told her.

A week went by and still there was no word from Kurt Wilhelm. The uncertainty, the nervous tension of waiting played on Molla's nerve. The week became 10 days. She tried to take her mind off the situation by going to a movie with Enid, by reading, by taking her camera and wandering around Central Park for pictures.

Then suddenly, one afternoon, Tay told her he had tickets to a boxing match at Madison Square Garden. Would she care to go?

She looked up quickly. It had been almost a week since he had said more than "hello" or passed little social amenities like the weather or the time of day.

"I'd like to very much," she said. "I have never been to a boxing match."

"This is a little more than a boxing match," he told her laconically. "This is for the welterweight championship of the world."

Madison Square Garden presented a much different appearance to Molla than when she had been there in the ice show.

They had sixth row, ringside seats and they pushed through the crowded aisle during the last preliminary before the main bout.

Around the apron of the ring, bathed in the glaring white lights overhead, were the sports writers, their typewriters clattering, the wires of the Morse operators crackling next to them.

Then the main bout, and as the principals came into the ring the flash bulbs went off. One of them, it seemed, went off right in Molla's face and she heard the photographer cry, "Thanks, Mr. Whitworth."

"What was that?" she asked.

"Oh, he's just snapping people at the ringside and picked on us for a couple of his victims."

Tay nodded toward the dark-visaged fighter in purple trunks. "The champion . . . he'll knock that guy loose from his pins in five rounds."

"You sound terribly blood-thirsty," she said with a grimace.

"Do I? Wait . . . you'll probably love this."

She didn't realize it at first, but at the end of the third round she found herself tearing at her purse strap and gasping breathlessly whenever a punch was landed.

Tay was pretty close to being right. It was all over in the sixth round and as the referee counted the fatal 10 over the challenger everyone was on his feet, shrieking.

Someone tugged lightly at Molla's arm. Tay was exchanging a few brief words with a newspaperman he knew and Molla looked around.

It was Eddie Bryan. "I want you to get off work day after tomorrow. I've got that screen test all lined up for you," he said quickly. He put up his two hands, gesturing forbiddingly.

"No 'buts' or 'maybes.' I'll pick you up at nine Friday morning."

These are the two men who have carried the ball for a united Pan-American war front, with President Vargas giving them potent 100 percent support in the background.

Strangely enough no two men could be more dissimilar. Oswaldo Aranha is an ex-gaúcho from the cattle country of Brazil, accustomed to appearing at horse races with two revolvers strapped to his belt, and equally at home around a roulette table or a dinner in the presidential palace.

Undersecretary of State Welles, on the other hand, had Roosevelt's background of Groton and Harvard, had the same godmother as Eleanor Roosevelt, was a page at the Roosevelt's wedding, and is an Anthony Eden edition of what the well-dressed diplomat is supposed to look like.

Underneath his somewhat austere exterior, however, Sumner Welles is just as much the human being as Oswaldo Aranha, and together they make a perfect team of resourceful, hard-hitting Hitler-Hirohito haters.

FATHER OF GOOD NEIGHBORS

Not many people realize it, but in South America, Welles is known as the father of Roosevelt's Good Neighbor policy — now recognized almost universally as the soundest foreign program put forward by any American president in half a century.

It was Sumner Welles who, when High Commissioner to the Dominican Republic way far back in the Coolidge Administration, persuaded Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State, to withdraw the Marines. This was the first step in getting U. S. troops out of the Caribbean area, always a source of suspicion to every Latin-American nation.

It was Welles also who wrote the famous Central American treaties during the Coolidge Administration by which revolutionary governments were denied recognition. His purpose was to prevent upstart military leaders from seizing control of the banana republics every few months. However, neither the Central Americans nor Calvin Coolidge were quite ready for this advanced stage of peace and good neighborliness, with the result that Welles resigned, and Coolidge sent the Marines back into Nicaragua.

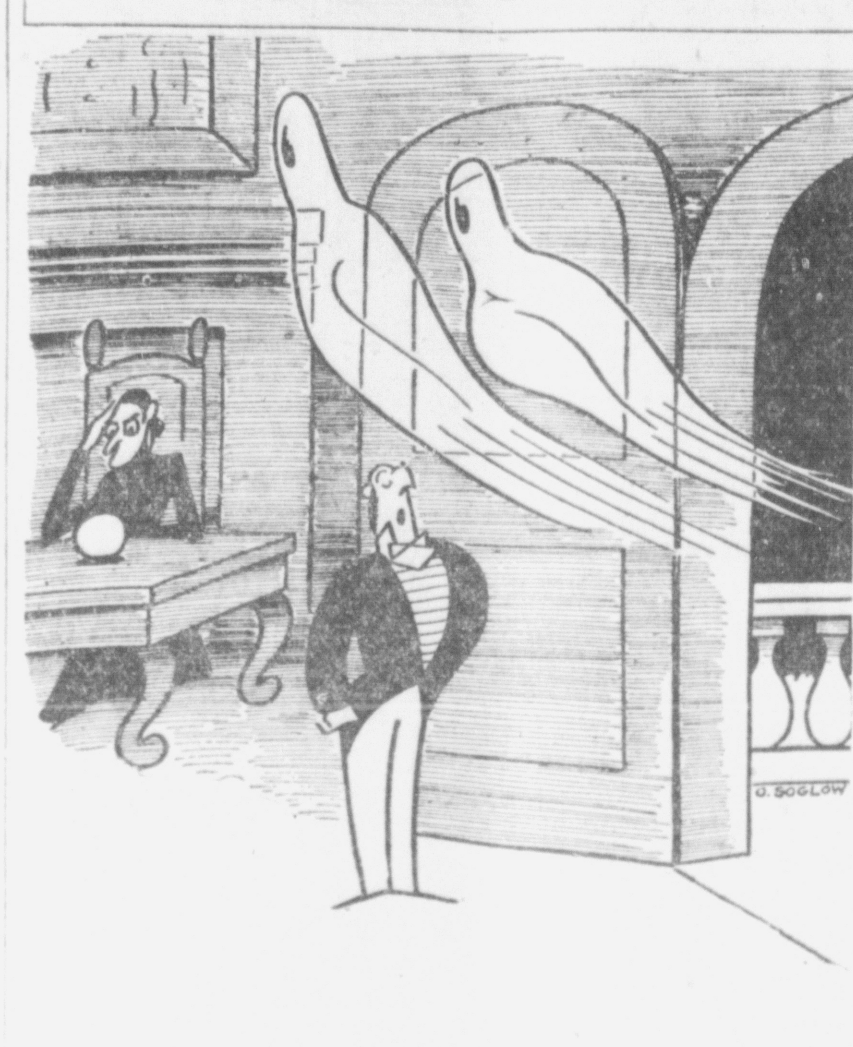

Welles waited patiently all during the Hoover Administration toward the end of which he put in a lot of political punches for the election of his boyhood friend Franklin Roosevelt. And not generally known is that Welles chiefly wrote the foreign affairs planks in the Democratic platform adopted at the 1932 Chicago convention.

Welles' record for constantly pounding the Good Neighbor policy needs no

Use Handkerchiefs to Prevent Spread of Colds

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
"HOW far that little candle throws its beam," to quote the Bard, could be applied to coughing and sneezing in this kind of weather: "How far that little sneeze throws its particles, so far

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

is spread a good cold in a naughty world."

We were astonished a few years ago to find out how far a sneeze carries. This was demonstrated by the work of Professor M. W. Jenkinson and Professor H. E. Edgerly at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. They took three hundred high speed photographs at exposures of 1/15,000 of a second of a number of sneezers.

The droplets which were cast out from the nose and throat, showed up plainly on the photographic plates. The sneeze can expel droplets with a velocity as high as 150 feet a second, or more than 100 miles an hour. A bullet from a regular .38-caliber revolver leaves the barrel of the revolver with a speed of about 630 feet a second.

Sneeze Droplets
The droplets from a sneeze are from 1/16 to less than 1/150 of an inch in diameter and evaporate quickly, but they leave solid nuclei of germs which take several days to settle to the ground. A sneeze can carry these particles as far as twelve feet.

Now this points out the fact that one of the great and important agents in preventive medicine is the pocket handkerchief. For the sake of everyone in the surrounding neighborhood, if you are going to sneeze and cough, get your pocket handkerchief, or at least your hand, in front of your nose and throat. If you are having a cold, you had better provide yourself with some gauze squares which you can use in this way and burn afterwards.

We are advised all the time during the cold season to avoid people with colds. This is easier said than

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO
Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Bales received a cablegram from their daughter, Mrs. M. Dewitt Moore, London, England, stating that she was sailing January 15 from Marseilles, France, to join Mr. Moore in Rangoon, Burma.

Pickaway County totaled 525 farm homes listed for service and 792 potential users of electricity under the tri-county program submitted to Ohio Rural Electrification offices. Two hundred and twenty nine miles of lines were needed to serve the county.

The Scioto River was reported at the 18-foot stage, about five and one-half feet under the mark established in 1913. The river was within six feet of touching the floor of the West Main Street bridge.

TEN YEARS AGO
Nathan C. Bohner, Monroe Township Democrat, announced his candidacy for reelection to the House of Representatives.

The importance of rural education as a national problem closely allied to agriculture, the greatest basic industry of America, was stressed by J. W. Fichter, assistant state director of education, before the superintendents and teachers of Pickaway County at Jackson Township School.

Ludwig Haacker, East High Street, succeeded Ferd Pickens as master of Boy Scout Troop 104.

No Refuge from Love

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION — JERRY BRONDFIELD

SYNOPSIS
MOLLA GLENDON comes to New York seeking refuge from the war that has swept across her native Norway, and from the bombs that shattered London, where she had fled from Oslo. She goes to work in the office of the Whitworth Construction company.

BURTON WHITWORTH, head of the company, was a friend of her deceased father. Molla needs TAYLOR WHITWORTH, handsome and dashing son of Burton, and NEIL LUNDQUIST, young field engineer of the company.

KURT WILHELM, escapee from a Canadian internment camp, appears in New York to bedevil Molla.

YESTERDAY: Molla reveals to Neil how she is bedeviled by Kurt, how she does not dare tell the police because of her family in Oslo.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN
NEIL STEERED Tay Whitworth and his father into the library after dinner that night. "I was going to keep this to myself for a while," he said abruptly, "but on second thought this matter is very much your concern and you've a right to know about it."

Burton Whitworth raised an inquiring eyebrow. "Shoot."

"Maybe that's the word we'll need, too," Neil said.

He told them the story of Kurt Wilhelm. When he had finished Burton Whitworth was pacing the floor nervously, his hands behind his back.

Tay looked at Neil queerly. He started to say something, changed his mind and lit a cigarette.

The elder Whitworth was silent for a long minute before he spoke. Then he plumped a fist into his other palm.

"There's only one thing to do at present. We can't go to the police, but there's no reason why we can't have a private detective sort of keep an eye on Molla until we think of a better way to handle this. What do you think, Neil?"

"As good an idea as any," Neil agreed. "We'll have to take it easy until he tips his hand."

"I don't want to intrude on the brain trust, but would you be interested in my slant, Dad?"

His father looked up quickly. "Oh—oh, of course."

Tay ground his cigarette into an ash tray. "Maybe this is the time to insist on Molla's staying here for a while. She'd be a lot safer, don't you think?"

"She'd be safer," Neil agreed, "but I don't think it would be as smart as the other plan. If she stayed here it would take Wilhelm just that much longer to give us an idea of what he's up to. I don't think Molla's in any personal danger yet, and until we find out what he has in store for him, I think we ought to give him all the rope he wants."

"Maybe you're right, Neil," Burton Whitworth murmured. "Meanwhile, we'd better tell her we're on dition and substantial cooperation from those in power and authority, well as contacts among diplomatic, political or secret bodies ready to give desired aid.

A child born on this day should be endowed with all the intellectual, cultural as well as personal and phisic qualities making for a successful, happy and praiseworthy career.

For Sunday, January 18
SUNDAY'S horoscope is a rather conflicting one, with promise of much of a benevolent, propitious and happy state of affairs in the domestic, social, emotional and cultural associations, but with omens of duplicity, intrigue and certain sinister and subtle undertones to urge vigilance and discretion. The business interests may perhaps suffer mainly.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a propitious and happy year in the domestic, romantic, social and cultural life, with some prosperity in connection with possessions and ambitions, but with an adverse and threatening undercurrent at the root of business writings or contracts.

A child born on this day should have splendid mentality and social qualities fitting it for an unusual, singular but brilliant career, with much personal happiness.

Words of Wisdom
Nothing, indeed, but the possession of some power can with any certainty discover what at the bottom is the true character of any man.—Burke.

Today's Horoscope
By nature, the folk who have birthdays today are persevering in all their efforts. They are generous, affectionate and will find happiness in love. For the next year they will experience excellent financial prospects, and should make the most of them. The year will be good for business, correspondence, travel, the seeking of favors and inheritance.

An elderly woman relative may cause annoyance, but they should avoid quarrels. The child who is born on this date will be cautious, prudent, faithful, sincere and usually grave in speech and action. He or she will also be keen-witted and dry humored, but kind-hearted.

Pianists Give Program For Presbyterian Group

Mrs. Van Vliet And Her Outstanding Players Appear

Mrs. Leon Van Vliet and a group of her piano pupils were heard in a splendid musical program at the meeting of the Women's Social Club Friday in the social room of the Presbyterian Church.

Mary Catherine Stein, one of her more advanced pupils, played five solos, the range of selections showing her outstanding ability.

Miss Stein's numbers were "Valse Triste," Sibelius; "Two Skylarks," Leschetizsky; "Russian Dance," Tchaikowsky; "Kamennoi - Ostrow," Rubinstein, and "The Star-Spangled Banner" by Key. All of her numbers were played from memory.

Two youthful performers were Marilyn Schumm, who played "Camptown Races," and Joanne Hill, whose selection was "Short'nin' Bread" by Wolfe.

Duets by Mrs. Van Vliet and Miss Eleanor Dreisbach were "Good Night" by Bendel and "Minuet" by W. A. Mozart.

"Country Dance" by Nevin was played by Mrs. Van Vliet and Miss Stein.

Mrs. Donald H. Watt, president, conducted the meeting and received the reports of Mrs. Leslie D. May, secretary, and Mrs. Florence Steele, treasurer.

The new silk flag which the group had purchased for the church was displayed at the meeting.

Mrs. Edward Sharpe opened the evening's entertainment with two fine readings.

Mrs. H. P. Folsom and Mrs. Charles Dresbach presided at the tea table when refreshments were served during the informal social hour.

An arrangement of small silk flags centered the table which had party appointments of red, white and blue.

More than 60 members and guests were present for the evening.

Mrs. Eva Dresbach and Mrs. Marvin Dreisbach were co-chairmen of the hospitality committee for the affair.

Shower Honors Bride

Mrs. Oscar Troehler, the former Marie Dumm, a recent bride, was honored at a miscellaneous shower Thursday at the home of Mrs. E. O. Dumm, Pickaway Township.

Other hostesses at the party were Mrs. Woodrow Dumm, Miss Geraldine Mock, Miss Ruth Creager and Mrs. Bernard Carle.

Two contests were enjoyed during the afternoon, prizes going to Mrs. Burr Rader, Mrs. Clarence Maxson and Mrs. Oscar Troehler.

Many useful gifts were received by the bride.

The guests included Mrs. Claudia Butler, Mrs. Edgar McClure and daughters, Mrs. William Troehler and Mrs. Oscar Troehler of Circleville; Mrs. Grover Dumm, Ashville; Mrs. Fairy Alkire, Mrs. Charles Baldoser, Mrs. Maxson and daughter, Mrs. Bernard W. Birthday Observed

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wallace and family of West Franklin Street were hosts at an informal dinner Thursday honoring Mrs. Wallace's mother, Mrs. A. V. Osborne, of East Main Street on her birthday anniversary. In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace and family, the others present at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Osborne and their sons, Billy and Pharo.

Presby-Weds

The women of the organization will entertain the men when the Presby-Weds group of the Presbyterian Church meets Wednesday in the social room of the church. A cooperative dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m.

Hunter Chambers will provide a musical program and Bernard Heskett, a teacher at Walnut Township School, will be the speaker of the evening.

Baha'i Group

The regular monthly meeting of the Circleville Baha'i study group will be held Sunday at 7:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Rolland Heiskell of East Union Street.

Harper Bible Class

The Harper Bible Class of the United Brethren Church met Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Dancy, Northridge Road, with 22 members present for the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Porter were assisting hosts.

Malcolm Russell, president, conducted the business session and ordered outstanding bills paid. Ira Valentine and Frank Moats were named members of a committee to increase the finances of the class. It was requested that class members save sales tax stamps for Easter money for the church.

The program arranged by Mrs. Charles Kirkpatrick included scripture reading by Clarence Radcliff and prayer by the Rev. A. N. Gruesser. Mrs. Radcliff and Mrs. Carroll Morgan presented readings and a current events contest was won by Mr. Russell and Robert Vandervort.

Refreshments were served during the closing social hour.

REID-GILBERT WEDDING

VOWS ARE EXCHANGED

At a quiet wedding Friday at 7:45 p. m. in the Lutheran Church of Ashville Miss Lou Ella Gilbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gilbert of 1279 Dennison Avenue, Columbus, and Mr. Francis Reid, son of Mrs. Elmer Malone of Ashville, exchanged their nuptial vows.

The Rev. H. D. Fudge read the single ring ceremony in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends.

The bride chose a smart frock of soldier blue for her wedding and used dubonnet accessories. Her corsage was of orchids.

Miss Betty Nichols of Columbus wore dusty pink with black accessories when she served as the bride's attendant. A corsage of carnations was pinned at her shoulder.

Mr. Jimmy Alexander of Ashville was best man for Mr. Reid. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Reid and his bride left for a short wedding trip. When they return, they will reside at 2658 East Main Street, Ashville.

Mr. Reid is assistant cashier of the Ashville Banking Co.

Among those present at the wedding service were Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert, daughters Janice, Helen and Thelma of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Malone and son, Junior, Miss Elizabeth Reid, Miss Kathryn Bowers, Mr. Bernard Walden and Mr. Claude Kraft of Ashville.

The meeting during which plans were made for the work of the group during the coming months. The usual lunch was omitted, the group planning to donate the money to war uses.

Fifteen members were present for the session.

JOHNSON HEADS BOOK CAMPAIGN IN HIGH SCHOOL

Daniel R. Proutz, Circleville librarian and head of the city's Victory book drive, has appointed Samuel R. Johnson to carry on this campaign in the high school.

The purposes of this drive are: To collect gifts of books for our soldiers, sailors and marines as a supplement to the library services maintained by the Army and Navy in forts, camps, posts, stations, and on ships.

To provide reading matter for the U.S.O. houses outside the camps and for the American Merchant Marine Library Association.

If the supply is more than sufficient for these needs, to provide books for men, women, and children in areas where industrial activities have increased population so that existing library resources are inadequate or non-existent.

Camp librarians report that the following are types of books in greatest demand, arranged by Dewey classification.

Applied psychology, current affairs, military publications, crime and the F.B.I., police systems and fingerprinting, English grammars.

Arithmetic, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, calculus and tables of logarithms, (mathematics books are needed in the study of ballistics and for many promotional examinations), up-to-date technical books.

Accounting, shorthand, business and salesmanship, lettering and mechanical drawing.

Photography, cartoons, well-illustrated books of all types, books about music and sports.

Novel and playwriting, poetry and individual plays, biography, travel (of the last ten years), biography (especially the shorter, more popular types), history (particularly European and North and South America since 1900).

Technical and scientific books earlier than 1935 are generally not useful. Texts in present use in law and medical schools are wanted by men who have had to stop professional courses to go into military training.

Under good fiction comes: adventure, aviation stories, historical novels, humor, mystery, sports, and western.

Mr. Johnson urges all high school students and teachers to contribute to this worthy cause. Home room teachers will accept books at anytime.

NEW MEMBERS TO BE CHOSEN BY H S STOOGES

Thursday evening new members will be voted into the Stooge Club. This is a usual occurrence at the end of the semester if there are any vacancies in the membership. All boys wishing to join the club should give their names to any Stooge member before Thursday at 3:45.

This week the boys who made up the "paper for defense" committee reported on their work. A committee consisting of Carl Bach, Frank Geib, Robert Goeller and Howard Moore were appointed to bail and wrap all paper collected by the club.

Plans were discussed for a proposed basketball game between the Hi-Y and the Stooge Club. The members decided to accept the challenge of the Hi-Y. Any member of either organization may participate providing that he is not on the present high school squad.

KELSEY SPEAKS ON PROPAGANDA

Tuesday morning the Reverend Mr. Robert E. Kelsey, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, was in the high school auditorium to conduct a religious program. After the scripture reading and two songs, Mr. Kelsey spoke on "Propaganda." He pointed out that there are two kinds of propaganda. One, the type we usually think of, is the propaganda which the war mongers use for their selfish aims. The other, that which is used for good purposes.

There is a need for spiritual propaganda in the world today. It may be used to mold characters. Spiritual propaganda strengthens, encourages and consoles.

The Church is the greatest agent for promoting this type of propaganda. It uses as its means of conveying these messages, sermons, song, and missionaries.

In closing, Mr. Kelsey compared spiritual propaganda to a gentle rain—soft and sweet—falling slowly and gently, it will gradually penetrate the soul.

Pianists Give Program For Presbyterian Group

Mrs. Van Vliet And Her Outstanding Players Appear

Mrs. Leon Van Vliet and a group of her piano pupils were heard in a splendid musical program at the meeting of the Women's Social Club Friday in the social room of the Presbyterian Church.

Mary Catherine Stein, one of her more advanced pupils, played five solos, the range of selections showing her outstanding ability. Miss Stein's numbers were "Valse Triste", Sibelius; "Two Skylarks", Leschetizky; "Russian Dance", Tschalkowsky; "Kamennol - Ostrow", Rubinstein, and "The Star-Spangled Banner" by Key. All of her numbers were played from memory.

Two youthful performers were Marilyn Schumm, who played "Camptown Races", and Joanne Hill, whose selection was "Short'nin' Bread" by Wolfe.

Duets by Mrs. Van Vliet and Miss Eleanor Dreisbach were "Good Night" by Bendel and "Minuet" by W. A. Mozart; "Country Dance" by Nevin was played by Mrs. Van Vliet and Miss Stein.

Mrs. Donald H. Watt, president, conducted the meeting and received the reports of Mrs. Leslie D. May, secretary, and Mrs. Florence Steele, treasurer.

The new silk flag which the group had purchased for the church was displayed at the meeting.

Mrs. Edward Sharpe opened the evening's entertainment with two fine readings.

Mrs. H. P. Folsom and Mrs. Charles Dresbach presided at the tea table when refreshments were served during the informal social hour. An arrangement of small silk flags centered the table which had party appointments of red, white and blue.

More than 60 members and guests were present for the evening.

Mrs. Eva Dresbach and Mrs. Marvin Dreisbach were co-chairmen of the hospitality committee for the affair.

Shower Honors Bride
Mrs. Oscar Troehler, the former Marie Dumm, a recent bride, was honored at a miscellaneous shower Thursday at the home of Mrs. E. O. Dumm, Pickaway Township.

Other hostesses at the party were Mrs. Woodrow Dumm, Miss Geraldine Mock, Miss Ruth Creager and Mrs. Bernard Carle.

Two contests were enjoyed during the afternoon, prizes going to Mrs. Burr Rader, Mrs. Clarence Maxson and Mrs. Oscar Troehler. Many useful gifts were received by the bride.

The guests included Mrs. Claudia Butler, Mrs. Edgar McClure and daughters, Mrs. William Troehler and Mrs. Oscar Troehler of Circleville; Mrs. Grover Dumm, Ashville; Mrs. Fairy Alkire, Mrs. Charles Baldoser, Mrs. Maxson and daughter, Mrs. Bernard W. Young, Mrs. Harry Wright, Mrs. E. C. Wilkins, Mrs. Abe Pontius, Mrs. Grace Phillips, Mrs. Riley Bittner, Mrs. Burr Rader, Miss Gladys Rader, Mrs. Cora Hood, Miss Nettie Rader, Mrs. Austin Wilson, Mrs. Philip Wilson and daughter, Mrs. Frank Graves, Mrs. Roger Jury, Mrs. Peter Waple, Mrs. John Miller, Mrs. Loren Dudson, Miss Norma Jean Penn, Miss Mary Davis, Miss Hazel Dumm, Marvin, Edward and David Dumm of Pickaway Township.

Birthday Observed
Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wallace and family of West Franklin Street were hosts at an informal dinner Thursday honoring Mrs. Wallace's mother, Mrs. A. V. Osborne, of East Main Street on her birthday anniversary. In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace and family, the others present at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Osborne and their sons, Billy and Pharo.

Presby-Weds
The women of the organization will entertain the men when the Presby-Weds group of the Presbyterian Church meets Wednesday in the social room of the church. A cooperative dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m.

Hunter Chambers will provide a musical program and Bernard Hoskett, a teacher at Walnut Township School, will be the speaker of the evening.

Baha'i Group
The regular monthly meeting of the Circleville Baha'i study group will be held Sunday at 7:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Rolland Heiskell of East Union Street.

Harper Bible Class
The Harper Bible Class of the United Brethren Church met Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Dancy, Northridge Road, with 22 members present for the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Porter were assisting hosts.

Malcolm Russell, president, conducted the business session and ordered outstanding bills paid. Ira Valentine and Frank Moats were named members of a committee to increase the finances of the class. It was requested that class members save sales tax stamps for Easter money for the church.

The program arranged by Mrs. Charles Kirkpatrick included scripture reading by Clarence Radcliff and prayer by the Rev. A. N. Gruesser. Mrs. Radcliff and Mrs. Carroll Morgan presented readings and a current events contest was won by Mr. Russell and Robert Vandervort.

Refreshments were served during the closing social hour.

REID-GILBERT WEDDING VOWS ARE EXCHANGED

At a quiet wedding Friday at 7:45 p. m. in the Lutheran Church of Ashville Miss Lou Ella Gilbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gilbert of 1279 Dennison Avenue, Columbus and Mr. Francis Reid, son of Mrs. Elmer Malone of Ashville, exchanged their nuptial vows. The Rev. H. D. Fudge read the single ring ceremony in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends.

The bride chose a smart frock of solid blue for her wedding and used dubonnet accessories. Her corsage was of orchids.

Miss Betty Nichols of Columbus wore dusty pink with black accessories when she served as the brides attendant. A corsage of carnations was pinned at her shoulder.

Mr. Jimmy Alexander of Ashville was best man for Mr. Reid. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Reid and his bride left for a short wedding trip. When they return, they will reside at 2658 East Main Street, Ashville.

Mr. Reid is assistant cashier of the Ashville Banking Co.

Among those present at the wedding service were Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert, daughters Janice, Helen and Thelma of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Malone and son, Junior, Miss Elizabeth Reid, Miss Kathryn Bowers, Mr. Bernard Walden and Mr. Claude Kraft of Ashville.

JOHNSON HEADS BOOK CAMPAIGN IN HIGH SCHOOL

Daniel R. Pfoutz, Circleville librarian and head of the city's Victory book drive, has appointed Samuel R. Johnson to carry on this campaign in the high school.

The purposes of this drive are: To collect gifts of books for our soldiers, sailors and marines as a supplement to the library services maintained by the Army and Navy in forts, camps, posts, stations, and on ships.

To provide reading matter for the U.S.O. houses outside the camps and for the American Merchant Marine Library Association.

If the supply is more than sufficient for these needs, to provide books for men, women, and children in areas where industrial activities have increased population so that existing library resources are inadequate or non-existent.

Camp librarians report that the following are types of books in greatest demand, arranged by Dewey classification.

Applied psychology, current affairs, military publications, crime and the F.B.I., police systems and fingerprinting, English grammars.

Arithmetic, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, calculus and tables of logarithms, (mathematics books are needed in the study of ballistics and for many promotional examinations), up-to-date technical books.

Accounting, shorthand, business and salesmanship, lettering and mechanical drawing.

Photography, cartoons, well-illustrated books of all types, books about music and sports.

Novel and playwriting, poetry and individual plays, biography, travel (of the last ten years), biography (especially the shorter, more popular types), history (particularly Europe and North and South America since 1900.)

Technical and scientific books earlier than 1935 are generally not useful. Texts in present use in law and medical schools are wanted by men who have had to stop professional courses to go into military training.

Under good fiction comes: adventure, aviation stories, historical novels, humor, mystery, sports, and western.

Mr. Johnson urges all high school students and teachers to contribute to this worthy cause. Home room teachers will accept books at anytime.

PUPILS TO TAKE MID-YEAR FINALS EARLY IN WEEK

How time flies. Already the '41-'42 school year is half over. And all high school students know what that means — semester exams.

On Monday and Tuesday there will be many students pacing the floors of vacant rooms, books in hand, trying to acquire that last bit of knowledge on the subject, for 'tis then that teachers will distribute mimeographed copies of mid-year tests to "shivering" pupils.

Monday morning all classes will run as usual except for Latin II pupils who take their exams at 8:30. The schedule follows:

Subject	Room	Time
Latin II	102	8:30
Eng I	109, 110, 212	12:45
Eng II	202, 204, 211	12:45

NEW MEMBERS TO BE CHOSEN BY H S STOOGES

Thursday evening new members will be voted into the Stooge Club. This is a usual occurrence at the end of the semester if there are any vacancies in the membership. All boys wishing to join the club should give their names to any Stooge member before Thursday at 3:45.

This week the boys who made up the "paper for defense" committee reported on their work. A committee consisting of Carl Bach, Frank Geib, Robert Goeller and Howard Moore were appointed to bail and wrap all paper collected by the club.

Plans were discussed for a proposed basketball game between the Hi-Y and the Stooge Club. The members decided to accept the challenge of the Hi-Y. Any member of either organization may participate providing that he is not on the present high school squad.

LOCAL RESERVES WILL BE GUESTS OF ATLANTA G.R.

Thursday at the regular meeting of the Senior Girl Reserves, President Dorothy Cook announced that the club had been invited to a song-fest on February 14. This is to be sponsored by the Girl Reserve club of Atlanta high school.

Further plans for the jitney lunch which is scheduled for January 21, were discussed, and the chairman of the various committees gave their reports.

Last week the names of those on the ticket committee for the jitney lunch were omitted. The committee consists of Miriam Brown, chairman, Janet Funk, Doris Hendricks, Jean Inler, Anna Sue Reichelderfer, and Dorothy Reid. Contact any member of this committee for your ticket since students may not enter without a ticket. Tickets are 5c and may be used to purchase one serving of food.

Eleanor Weaver was elected treasurer for the remainder of the year.

Frank Geib and David Orr presented a program on the "Ideal Girl" each boy giving his ideas on the subject. A question period followed in which the girls were permitted to ask any question on the subject.

KELSEY SPEAKS ON PROPAGANDA

Tuesday morning the Reverend Mr. Robert E. Kelsey, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, was in the high school auditorium to conduct a religious program. After the scripture reading and two songs, Mr. Kelsey spoke on "Propaganda." He pointed out that there are two kinds of propaganda. One, the type we usually think of, is the propaganda which the war mongers use for their selfish aims. The other, that which is used for good purposes.

There is a need for spiritual propaganda in the world today. It may be used to mold characters. Spiritual propaganda strengthens, encourages and consoles.

The Church is the greatest agent for promoting this type of propaganda. It uses as its means of conveying these messages, sermons, songs, and missionaries.

In closing, Mr. Kelsey compared spiritual propaganda to a gentle rain—soft and sweet—falling slowly and gently, it will gradually penetrate the soul.

SUBSTITUTE TEACHERS

Miss Reba Lee has been substituting all this week for Mr. Joseph Horst who had been ill. Mr. Horst is suffering from influenza. Mrs. Clark Will took Miss Gretchen Moeller's place as librarian this week. Miss Moeller broke her ankle when she fell on the ice more than a week ago.

DR. HUGH STUNTZ TALKS ON SOUTH AMERICAN TOPICS

Wednesday afternoon marked the opening of the fourth annual "Institute of International Understanding" which the Circleville Rotary Club sponsors.

Each Wednesday, for four weeks, a qualified speaker will be in the high school auditorium in the afternoon to speak to the pupils of the high school and in the social room in the evening where he will speak to the citizens of Circleville.

First of the group of four speakers was Dr. Hugh C. Stuntz whose subject was "Our Neighbors in South America." Dr. Stuntz has spent twenty years in South America where he was engaged in educational and literary work. Of these twenty years he spent seven in Chile, three in Bolivia and ten in Argentina. In 1936 he was appointed to the staff of interpreter-translators for the American delegation of the Peace Conference in Buenos Aires. Dr. Stuntz is much in demand as a lecturer in the United States today. He not only understands the South American people and their feelings, but he also understands the attitude which the United States must take if it is to readily attain a leadership role in the Western Hemisphere.

"People of America," Dr. Stuntz said, "do not understand our neighbors well enough."

People of Buenos Aires are very correct in their dress. A gentleman always wears his coat. They tip their hats, not only to ladies, but to other men.

Ladies dress very smartly and wear clothes that are quite as nice as ours in America.

These people of Argentina are most courteous and hospitable. Buenos Aires is a very modern city with all the modern conveniences. There are many Indians in Argentina. There are many Indians in Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. These Indians are short, stocky people who make good soldiers.

Most of the Indians are slaves. They are afraid of the white men because they have been cheated for a long time by them. It is nothing for a white man to whip his Indians, even in this day of civilization.

In concluding his talk, Dr. Stuntz taught the assembly an Aztec Indian song which the children sing while playing a game. Then he told them the meaning of the song, which was a very sad love story.

Next week, Eric I. Grimwade, will talk about "Our Neighbors of the British Isles." He has been in England for the last several years and has an understanding of the British people and their problems.

—Beat Ashville—

PICTURES SHOWN TO LOCAL CLUB

At this regular meeting this week the Hi-Y boys saw moving pictures.

Walter Leist used his grandfather's projector and screen to show scenes of Tusculum College, Tennessee, and pictures of Circleville football practices and games which Assistant Coach Thomas Armstrong lent the club for this occasion. He also showed five reels of Canadian pictures which his grandfather, Harley Betz, took last summer. The boys wish to thank Mr. Betz and Mr. Armstrong for the use of these films and equipment.

After the program several of the boys practiced basketball in preparation for proposed games with other Hi-Y clubs. Ezra McCollough, district supervisor of the Hi-Y branch of the Y.M.C.A., will schedule these games.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

(Continued from Page Six) further review here. But this week at Rio de Janeiro he reached the climax of his ambitions—the attempt to create a united front against all the dictators by all the Americas.

Oswaldo Aranha, Welle's co-partner in this ambition, is the son of a wealthy cattle-rancher. He was educated at a military school, spent five years fighting in Brazilian revolutions—most of the time in the saddle—and has a heel partly shot away plus a bullet still lodged in his shoulder to show for it.

Aranha was the military leader of the revolutionary army of 1930 which made Getulio Vargas President of Brazil, and won for Henry L. Stimson the nickname "Wrong Horse Harry." Stimson, then Secretary of State, bet on the wrong horse and sent U. S. planes to support the regime which Aranha defeated.

Aranha spent four years in Washington, where as Ambassador he got to know the U. S. A. as few other envoys. He took a motor trip to the West Coast, went to the Kentucky Derby with Jim Farley (where, incidentally, he won $1,500) visited with all sorts of people from Herbert Hoover to John L. Lewis, and even attended the conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties.

One of his descriptions of the conventions is still remembered in Washington.

"At Cleveland," said Aranha, "the Republicans promised Santa Claus to both the rich and the poor, while at Philadelphia, the Democrats promised Santa Claus to the poor with the rich man's money."

Ever since his four years in Washington, Aranha has been known as the chief friend of the U. S. A. below the Rio Grande. He has deserved that title; for sometimes in the face of tough political sledding at home and rebuffs even from his alleged friends in Washington, he has stuck by the United States.

Once when he was invited on a special visit to Washington, President Roosevelt went off on a fishing trip and kept Aranha waiting for a full month without even inviting him to lunch. Roosevelt has thrown all sorts of fancy parties for Princess Juliana of Holland, Princess Martha of Norway and other royalty. But Sumner Welles had to put the bee on him before he would make a definite date for luncheon with the Foreign Minister of Brazil.

But meanwhile, Aranha, always loyal to his friends, notified the Nazi ambassador to Brazil that he could not come back to Rio, actually had him taken off a boat at Lisbon and sent back to Berlin. Simultaneously, Aranha uncovered Nazi correspondence showing that German Ambassador Dieckhoff in Washington was head man for all Nazi subversive activity in the Western Hemisphere. No one knew it, but it was his discovery which led to the ousting of Dieckhoff and the recall of U. S. Ambassador Hugh Wilson from Berlin.

Aranha carries great weight with every Latin American foreign minister, and today he is the man who is doing most to line up the Americas officially and emphatically against Hitler and Hirohito.

MERRY-GO-ROUND WASHINGTON — Diplomats who were not anxious to travel by air to the Pan-American Conference in Rio de Janeiro, decided to sail on the S. S. Argentina January 2, arriving in Rio January 14. This was why the date of the Conference was fixed for January 15. A few days later the Navy took over the S. S. Argentina, so the delegates traveled 6,000 miles by air.

COMMITTEE SET UP TO SPEED SALE OF BONDS AND STAMPS

Earl Smith, Chairman For Pickaway County, Plans Intense Campaign

Appointment of a committee to promote the sale of Defense Stamps and Bonds in Circleville and Pickaway County was announced Saturday by Earl Smith, local representative in charge of bond sales.

The newly appointed committee will contact various organizations, schools, churches and industries in the community to urge the purchase of Defense Savings Stamps and Bonds.

Turney Glick, Circleville Route 3, will serve as chairman of the agricultural committee, whose duty will be to contact the farming groups of the county. George D. McDowell, county school superintendent, will have charge of the stamp and bond sale in the county schools and will function through the local school superintendents.

Frank Fischer, superintendent of Circleville schools, will conduct the campaign in the city.

Richard C. McAllister, 580 North Court Street, will supervise the Stamp and Bond sale among the city's industries and utilities. George Griffith, chairman of the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce, will direct the sale among the retail merchants, and Mrs. John Eshelman, North Pickaway Street, will head a committee which will contact all the women's organizations of the community.

Mayor Ben H. Gordon will be chairman of a committee which will solicit the municipalities and the Rev. Neil H. Peterson, president of the Pickaway County Ministerial Association, will plan the campaign in the churches of the city and county.

C. A. Weldon, South Court Street, will contact the professional men of the city and county and Sheriff Charles Radcliff the fraternal and veterans' organizations. Robert G. Colville, county treasurer, will contact county officials and county institutions.

Three Types Sold

Three types of bonds will be among those sold by the committee, Chairman Smith pointed out. The most popular of these is Series E, or the People's Bond. Defense Savings bonds of Series E will be issued in registered form, in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. The bonds will be dated as of the first day of the month in which payment of the issue price is received and the bonds will mature and be payable at face value 10 years from the date issued. The bonds may not be called for redemption by the Secretary of the Treasury prior to maturity, but they may be redeemed prior to maturity, after 60 days from the issue date, at the owner's option, at fixed redemption values. No interest as such will be paid on the bond, but they will increase in redemption value at the end of the first year from issue date, and at the end of each successive half-year period thereafter until their maturity, when the face amount becomes payable. The purchase price of Series E bonds has been fixed so as to afford an investment yield of about 2.9 percent per annum compounded semiannually if the bonds are held to maturity; if the owner exercises his option to redeem a bond prior to the maturity the investment yield will be less.

Bonds of Series F are 12-year appreciation bonds, Chairman Smith explained. They are issued on a discount basis at 74 percent of maturity value, investment yield. The purchase price of the Foiled in their plan to smash resistance of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's troops in the Philippines, the Japs have turned to their veteran advance units in an effort to infiltrate defense lines in North Bataan.

While looting and devastating occupied areas of the islands, the Japanese also brought its dive bombers and attack planes into action against MacArthur's positions, the War Department announced.

Interpreting these operations, military men said that the effort to infiltrate the American-Philippine lines probably is designed to secure accurate information as to the disposition of prepared positions and perhaps to set the stage for a pincer effort. Any effort to effect a pincer move, experts explained, would include landings of Japanese troops near the Subic Bay region of Bataan, an operation Tokyo radio announcers have said already is under way but which lacked confirmation in Washington.

War Department spokesmen described the Japs' infiltration units as "trained athletes and probably the toughest campaigners in Japan's army." It was said that these crack soldiers operate in small bands of less than 100 men.

PACIFIC FLEET BLASTING FOES AT ALL POINTS

Our planes observed one Jap submarine floating lazily on the surface to the west and unloaded heavy depth charges on him.

From this ship's communication bridge we saw a destroyer race for another point. And a few moments later the boom of the destroyer's depth charges came echoing back to us.

But it is possible to state that the officers and men of this fleet are in wonderful spirits and health.

The sick bay of this ship is empty, despite the fact the vessel is jammed beyond its normal complement and the men are standing long watches at the guns.

The excellent health is maintained through strict and speedy isolation of anyone who shows a sign of illness, and strict sterilization of all dishes and cooking utensils.

BIG FOOD STORE READY IN CASE OF JAP ATTACK

BATAVIA, Jan. 17 — Huge stores of food have been set aside in Sumatra, Dutch East Indies island near the scene of Malayan fighting, in expectation of a possible attack by the Japanese, it was revealed today.

The Netherlands Indies government foresees the present emergency and even before the outbreak of war had assembled large stocks of rice in Sumatra, it was said.

Vast amounts of corn have been cultivated in the Sumatra area on government order, according to the report.

Miss Lombard and her party were returning to Hollywood from Indianapolis where she had participated in an Indiana Defense Bond drive.

The plane refueled at Las Vegas for the last lap of its transcontinental flight. It took off for Los Angeles—nearly an hour and a half by air—at 7:07 p. m.

Twenty minutes later the ship crashed and burned on the side of the mountain in the Potosi range, about 30 miles southwest of Las Vegas.

T. W. A. officials were advised of the tragedy at 7:30 p. m. and company executives and investigators left immediately in a chartered plane for the scene of the crash.

Officials said that the ship struck the mountain only 100 feet from the crest of the 8,700-foot peak. They were at a loss to explain probable cause of the disaster as visibility and weather conditions in the area were reported good.

Dan Yanish, watchman at the Elce Diamond mine, telephoned first reports of the crash.

"I was watching the plane go over our diggings," he said. "It was a beautiful night, clear as a bell, and you could see for miles. "It hardly seemed minutes as the plane faded away over Charleston Range way, when I saw a flash and then big tongues of flames racing skyward from a mountain side.

"The peak was covered with snow and the glistening white sparkled from the red of the fire." All available ambulances and motor cars gathered in Las Vegas shortly after the crash was reported and they left for the vicinity of Table Mountain.

Because the region is one of the most rugged in Nevada, searchers abandoned automobiles and vehicles at the foot of the mountain and pressed up the steep slopes on foot and on horseback.

Major H. W. Anderson, executive officer of the Air Corps Gunnery School at nearby McCarran Field, was in charge of the searching parties.

T. W. A. said that the plane was flying slightly behind schedule because of a delay in Albuquerque to arrange for the fight of a group of Army officers and men from there.

Four persons gave up their seats to accommodate the Army men. Passengers remaining at Albuquerque were identified as J. Squigetti, a Miss Johnson, Mrs. C. B. Randner and Florence Sawyer.

END OF BORDER DISPUTE LOOMS IN S. AMERICA

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 17—A solution for the century-old Ecuador-Peru boundary dispute was reported to have been found today as special committees went to work on specific problems of the Pan American conference of foreign ministers.

The conference had been adjourned until Monday, but the smaller committees were said to have their hands full in settling detailed matters.

One of the most vexing problems was the Ecuador-Peru dispute. Ecuador had earlier threatened to bolt the conference unless a basis for settlement was reached before larger international matters were discussed.

him goodnight in halting German. In the Legation, Paul Schmidt of the Foreign Office and some of his aids had watched Boemer from afar, sure that he would make a spectacle of himself and thus add another black mark on the record.

What they didn't know for the moment was that the sharp-eyed questioners around him were goading him on, flattering him with fine words of admiration.

Goaded On By Listeners

"Ach, Herr Boemer, you big men know so much," one of the suave ones whispered to him. "But they say here you don't know any more than the rest of us about the Russian situation?"

It was the kind of bait held out to him at exactly the right moment. They had angled for this the whole evening, maneuvering and fencing to arouse his ire and provoked him into spilling any information he might be hiding under his hat. The fumes and powers of vodka did the rest.

"I know all about everything," Boemer spouted suddenly. "Two months from today our dear old Rosenberg will be the boss of Russia and Stalin will be a dead man. We will smash the Russians quicker than we smashed the French. We'll show the Bolsheviks who is running Europe. Hitler, not Stalin. These Bolshevik pigs will find that out now."

The shock officials from the Wilhelmstrasse, Schmidt included, tried to stop him from his wild outburst. He stumbled through the reception rooms and raged and raved that he was going to be a Staats-Sekretair. His army chauffeur finally got him outside and away from there.

That is why the chancelleries of Europe on that fatal night teemed with excitement; no doubt Stalin worked the night through and if from previous information drifting in from the Hess case and other sources he still had doubts on Hitler's intentions, he now knew what to do. The Red Army rolled towards the western borders, scores and scores of fully equipped divisions ready for war.

In Wilhelmstrasse next day Goebbels tried to save Boemer from his blunder. He hastily dictated a letter to Hitler explaining the background and pointing out that Boemer was overworked and had made his bad mistake without any premeditated intention.

It could be overlooked, and what he had said could be denied as another of those rumors circulating around by the dozen. A long report on the affair from the Foreign Office and Goebbels' letter were handed to Hitler simultaneously.

Hitler took one look and hit the ceiling. An hour later special Gestapo men picked up Boemer in his office in Wilhelmstrasse and took him over to Himmler's headquarters in Albrecht Strasse as Hitler's personal prisoner.

Case Turned Over To Gestapo
Those in the know around Hitler later told me they fully expected that Boemer would be shot almost immediately, but there again Hitler's strange quirk of following legal procedure came to the surface. He turned the case over to the Gestapo and that is how it came about that Boemer, the Number Four in Naziland, sat behind the bars from the middle of May, 1941 to October 17 before his trial came up before the People's court.

Day by day the outburst against America and Roosevelt in the press and on the radio became intensified, agitating and poisoning the German people's minds against us.

It didn't take much imagination to know that Hitler was pressing a new button.

In the Foreign Office, Paul Schmidt achieved full ambassadorial rank and within the space of weeks practically muscled out the Propaganda Ministry in all things that count in dealings with foreign press policy and foreign correspondents. He was tops now, unrivaled and unchallenged. He, the green young man of a few years ago from out of the sticks, had won out and it remained but to make sure that Caesar was dead.

So he went to the People's Court with his aides on that first morning of the Boemer trial cocksure and confident he would nail Boemer to the mast.

Death Sentence Demanded

All the mighty string-pulling of the last six months had failed to move Hitler to lift a finger in behalf of Boemer; it was but logical for Schmidt to assume that the die was cast and that the life sentence if not a death pronouncement was sure to come. He stood blandly before the court and declared that mercy must not be shown in such a case. He never looked at the man in the prisoner's box, coldly delivering his testimony.

Two famous girl dancers, several girls from the night clubs were put on the stand as witnesses and questioned as to their relations with the prisoner.

The shock for them was all the greater, therefore, when lightning struck at the resumption of the session at 3 p. m. They could hardly believe their ears when the doors opened and up to the witness stand hobbled none other than Minister for Propaganda Doktor Paul Joseph Goebbels, dark eyes flaring and the grooved mouth firmly set.

Pleads for Boemer

White-faced and visibly shaken Schmidt sat in nervous silence on the spectator's bench and listened to the incisive oration flowing from the lips of silver-tongued Joe Goebbels. He traced in detail before this court of life and death the career of the blond man in the prisoner's box, dwelling at length on what he described as the great services rendered the fatherland.

He testified for nearly an hour and a half, leaving no word in the dictionary untouched or phrase unturned. He held them spellbound and somewhat awed, ending with a sweeping announcement that the Fuehrer himself had sanctioned this appearance of his minister before the People's Court.

Then he stamped out as quickly as he had come, never once glancing at the portly man from the Foreign Office and his aides on the spectator's bench.

It had been cleverly arranged, this massing of the big batteries for the last. It made it conceivably easier for Boemer himself to get up at last and speak in his own defense. He had no excuses to offer on the secret spilled, but he did have a double-barrelled argument in his own favor.

"I did not break the secret of Russia to foreign ears," he declared with firm voice.

"I merely repeated that which had already reached enemy ears. I remind the gentlemen of the court that the self-imposed mission of Rudolph Hess in his flight to England centered largely on his conviction that by telling England Hitler at last would smash Russia, he could effect peace with England and even bring England to our side."

"The secret of Russia went to England with Hess, and I say again to this court that I unintentionally repeated and probably confirmed to a greater extent what must already be known to the other side."

COMMITTEE SET UP TO SPEED SALE OF BONDS AND STAMPS

Earl Smith, Chairman For Pickaway County, Plans Intense Campaign

Appointment of a committee to promote the sale of Defense Stamps and Bonds in Circleville and Pickaway County was announced Saturday by Earl Smith, local representative in charge of bond sales.

The newly appointed committee will contact various organizations, schools, churches and industries in the community to urge the purchase of Defense Savings Stamps and Bonds.

Turney Glick, Circleville Route 3, will serve as chairman of the agricultural committee, whose duty will be to contact the farming groups of the county. George D. McDowell, county school superintendent, will have charge of the stamp and bond sale in the county schools and will function through the local school superintendents.

Frank Fischer, superintendent of Circleville schools, will conduct the campaign in the city.

Richard C. McAllister, 580 North Court Street, will supervise the Stamp and Bond sale among the city's industries and utilities. George Griffith, chairman of the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce, will direct the sale among the retail merchants, and Mrs. John Eshelman, North Pickaway Street, will head a committee which will contact all the women's organizations of the community.

Mayor Ben H. Gordon will be chairman of a committee which will solicit the municipalities and the Rev. Neil H. Peterson, president of the Pickaway County Ministerial Association, will plan the campaign in the churches of the city and county.

C. A. Weldon, South Court Street, will contact the professional men of the city and county and Sheriff Charles Radloff the fraternal and veterans' organizations. Robert G. Colville, county treasurer, will contact county officials and county institutions.

Three Types Sold

Three types of bonds will be among those sold by the committee, Chairman Smith pointed out. The most popular of these is Series E, or the People's Bond. Defense Savings bonds of Series E will be issued in registered form in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. The bonds will be dated as of the first day of the month in which payment of the issue price is received and the bonds will mature and be payable at face value 10 years from the date issued. The bonds may not be called for redemption by the Secretary of the Treasury prior to maturity, but they may be redeemed prior to maturity, after 60 days from the issue date, at the owner's option, at fixed redemption values. No interest as such will be paid on the bond, but they will increase in redemption value at the end of the first year from issue date, and at the end of each successive half-year period thereafter until their maturity, when the face amount becomes payable. The purchase price of Series E bonds has been fixed so as to afford an investment yield of about 2.9 percent per annum compounded semiannually if the bonds are held to maturity, if the owner exercises his option to redeem a bond prior to the maturity the investment yield will be less.

Bonds of Series F are 12-year appreciation bonds. Chairman Smith explained. They are issued on a discount basis at 74 percent of maturity value, investment yield. The purchase price of the

The memorable film, which starts Sunday for three days at the new deluxe Grand Theatre, has been called "Claudette Colbert's greatest." John Shepperd, Ann Todd, Douglas Croft and many others complete the cast of the film.

JAMES Stewart and Paulette Goddard are stars in "Pot O' Gold," which opens Sunday at the Circle Theatre for a three day run. Also booked by the Circle is "Texas," a western with an all-star cast.

as he had come, never once glancing at the portly man from the Foreign Office and his aides on the spectator's bench.

It had been cleverly arranged, this mawing of the big batteries for the last. It made it conceivably easier for Boemer himself to get up at last and speak in his own defense. He had no excuses to offer on the secret spilled, but he did have a double-barreled argument in his own favor.

"I did not break the secret of Russia to foreign ears," he declared with firm voice.

"I merely repeated that which had already reached enemy ears. I remind the gentlemen of the court that the self-imposed mission of Rudolph Hess in his flight to England centered largely on his conviction that by telling England Hitler at last would smash Russia, he could effect peace with England and even bring England to our side."

"The secret of Russia went to England with Hess, and I say again to this court that I unintentionally repeated and probably confirmed to a greater extent what must already been known to the other side."

Sentenced To Prison
"We find the defendant guilty of an irresponsible act injurious to the state," the judge in the black robe and cap said. "But in view of the special circumstances and conditions demonstrated in this case, this court sentences the prisoner to the merciful leniency of two years in prison. The six months already served during the investigation are to be made retroactive."

EDWARD LEMLEY DIES IN BERGER HOSPITAL

Edward Lemley, Hayward Avenue, died Friday at 10:30 p. m. in Berger Hospital. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Nettie B. Parham of Chillicothe.

The funeral will be Monday at 3 p. m. in the Albaugh Chapel, the Rev. Robert Kelsey officiating. Burial will be in Forest Cemetery.

The lobster is an inhabitant of the sea bottom, for its body is too heavy and unwieldy for active swimming.
